DEVOTED TO ALLAH

Muslim is actually the name Allah gives to those who adhere to His religion. The basic attribute, referred to in the Qur’an, that distinguishes Muslims from other people is their absolute awareness of Allah’s infinite might.

Grasping Allah’s might is not only a matter of verbal confirmation. Believers are those who recognize Allah’s existence and His greatness, love Him and fear Him, “are steadfast in their duty” to Him and re-orient all their deeds and conduct in the light of this reality which has become apparent to them. This book provides an explicit picture of a believer devoted to Allah as described in the Qur’an. It must be remembered that Paradise is the abode of those who “believe with certainty” in Allah and the Hereafter and then “strive with all due striving” in the way of Allah. The end of those who “worship Allah right on the fringe of true faith” and place their trivial interests on the same footing as the pleasure of Allah is described thus in the Qur’an:

Among the people there are some who profess to serve Allah but who stand on the very fringe of good faith. If good befalls them, they are content, but if an ordeal befalls them, they revert to their former ways, losing both this world and the Hereafter. That way true perdition lies. (Surat al-Hajj, 11)

About The Author

Now writing under the pen-name of HARUN YAHYA, Adnan Oktar was born in Ankara in 1956. Having completed his primary and secondary education in Ankara, he studied fine arts at Istanbul’s Mimar Sinan University and philosophy at Istanbul University. Since the 1980s, he has published many books on political, scientific, and faith-related issues. Harun Yahya is well-known as the author of important works disclosing the imposture of evolutionists, their invalid claims, and the dark liaisons between Darwinism and such bloody ideologies as fascism and communism.

Harun Yahya’s works, translated into 72 different languages, constitute a collection for a total of more than 55,000 pages with 40,000 illustrations.

His pen-name is a composite of the names Harun (Aaron) and Yahya (John), in memory of the two esteemed Prophets who fought against their peoples’ lack of faith. The Prophet’s seal on his books’ covers is symbolic and is linked to their contents. It represents the Qur’an (the Final Scripture) and Prophet Muhammad (saas), last of the prophets. Under the guidance of the Qur’an and the Sunnah (teachings of the Prophet [saas]), the author makes it his purpose to disprove each fundamental tenet of irreligious ideologies and to have the “last word,” so as to completely silence the objections raised against religion. He uses the seal of the final Prophet (saas), who attained ultimate wisdom and moral perfection, as a sign of his intention to offer the last word.

All of Harun Yahya’s works share one single goal: to convey the Qur’an’s message, encourage readers to consider basic faith-related issues such as Allah’s existence and unity and the hereafter; and to expose irreligious systems’ feeble foundations and perverted ideologies.

Harun Yahya enjoys a wide readership in many countries, from India to America, England to Indonesia, Poland to Bosnia, Spain to Brazil, Malaysia to Italy, France to Bulgaria and Russia. Some of his books are available in English, French, German, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Urdu, Arabic, Albanian, Chinese, Swahili, Hausa, Dhivehi (spoken in Maldives), Russian, Serbo-Croat (Bosnian), Polish, Malay, Uygur Turkish, Indonesian, Bengali, Danish and Swedish.

Greatly appreciated all around the world, these works have been instrumental in many people recovering faith in Allah and gaining deeper insights into their faith. His books’ wisdom and sincerity, together with a distinct style that’s easy to understand, directly affect anyone who reads them. Those who seriously consider these books, can no longer advocate atheism or any other perverted ideology or materialistic philosophy, since these books are characterized by rapid effectiveness, definite results, and irrefutability. Even if they continue to do so, it will be only a sentimental insistence, since these books refute such ideologies from their very foundations. All contemporary movements of denial are now ideologically defeated, by means of the books written by Harun Yahya.

This is no doubt a result of the Qur’an’s wisdom and lucidity. The author modestly intends to serve as a means in humanity’s search for Allah’s right path. No material gain is sought in the publication of these works.

Those who encourage others to read these books, to open their minds and hearts and guide them to become more devoted servants of Allah, render an invaluable service.

Meanwhile, it would only be a waste of time and energy to propagate other books that create confusion in people’s minds, lead them into ideological confusion, and that clearly have no strong and precise effects in removing the doubts in people’s hearts, as also verified from previous experience. It is impossible for books devised to emphasize the author’s literary power rather than the noble goal of saving people from loss of faith, to have such a great effect. Those who doubt this can readily see that the sole aim of Harun Yahya’s books is to overcome disbelief and to disseminate the Qur’an’s moral values. The success and impact of this service are manifested in the readers’ conviction.

One point should be kept in mind: The main reason for the continuing cruelty, conflict, and other ordeals endured by the vast majority of people is the ideological prevalence of disbelief. This can be ended only with the ideological defeat of disbelief and by conveying the wonders of creation and Qur’anic morality so that people can live by it. Considering the state of the world today, leading into a downward spiral of violence, corruption and conflict, clearly this service must be provided speedily and effectively, or it may be too late.

In this effort, the books of Harun Yahya assume a leading role. By the will of Allah, these books will be a means through which people in the twenty-first century will attain the peace, justice, and happiness promised in the Qur’an.
TO THE READER

The reason why a special chapter is assigned to the collapse of the theory of evolution is that this theory constitutes the basis of all anti-spiritual philosophies. Since Darwinism rejects the fact of creation, and therefore the existence of Allah, during the last 140 years it has caused many people to abandon their faith or fall into doubt. Therefore, showing that this theory is a deception is a very important duty, which is strongly related to the religion. It is imperative that this important service be rendered to everyone. Some of our readers may find the chance to read only one of our books. Therefore, we think it appropriate to spare a chapter for a summary of this subject.

In all the books by the author, faith-related issues are explained in the light of Qur’anic verses, and people are invited to learn Allah’s words and to live by them. All the subjects that concern Allah’s verses are explained in such a way as to leave no room for doubt or question marks in the reader’s mind. The sincere, plain and fluent style employed ensures that everyone of every age and from every social group can easily understand the books. This effective and lucid narrative makes it possible to read them in a single sitting. Even those who rigorously reject spirituality are influenced by the facts recounted in these books and cannot refute the truthfulness of their contents.

This book and all the other works by Harun Yahya can be read individually or discussed in a group. Those readers who are willing to profit from the books will find discussion very useful in that they will be able to relate their own reflections and experiences to one another.

In addition, it is a great service to the religion to contribute to the presentation and circulation of these books, which are written solely for the good pleasure of Allah. All the books of the author are extremely convincing, so, for those who want to communicate the religion to other people, one of the most effective methods is to encourage them to read these books.

It is hoped that the reader will take time to look through the review of other books on the final pages of the book, and appreciate the rich source of material on faith-related issues, which are very useful and a pleasure to read.

In them, one will not find, as in some other books, the personal views of the author, explanations based on dubious sources, styles unobservant of the respect and reverence due to sacred subjects, or hopeless, doubt-creating, and pessimistic accounts that create deviations in the heart.

... Allah will guide to the ways of peace those who follow what pleases Him. He will bring them by His will from darkness to the light, and will guide them to a straight path.

(Surat al-Ma’ida: 16)

What makes a sincerely believing Muslim different from other people? People who do not sincerely believe may answer this question in a number of ways; they may talk about cultural and moral differences, about “different outlooks on the world” or values which they deny outright. Alternatively, some may say the difference has its roots in the “different views” which the sincere believers embrace and they don’t approve.

However, all these answers relate to “visible” differences that appear to be the consequences of a more fundamental one. Often, they fail to grasp the reasons underlying this difference. (In fact, the reason they are not sincere believers is because they have failed to grasp this very difference.)

Muslim is actually the name Allah gives to those who adhere to His religion. The basic attribute, referred to in the Qur’an, that distinguishes believers from other people is their being totally aware of Allah’s infinite might. Awareness of Allah’s infinite might does not in all cases mean affirmation of the existence of Our Creator, Almighty Allah, however. In the Qur’an this fact is underlined as follows:

Say: “Who provides for you out of heaven and earth? Who controls hearing and sight? Who brings forth the living from the dead and the dead from the living? Who ordains all things?” They will reply, “Allah.” Say, “Then will you not fear Allah? Such is Allah, your Lord, the Truth, and what is there after truth except misguidance? How then can you turn away from Him?” (Surah Yunus: 31-32)

In the verse above, the questions are put to somebody who expresses his belief in Allah, accepts His attributes yet, despite all these attributes, has no fear of Allah and thus turns away from Him. (In fact, it is revealed in the Qur’an that satan confesses he believes in the existence of Allah and has fear of Allah but displays a mutinous attitude and a kind of ill character.

Grasping Allah’s might is not only a matter of verbal expression. Believers are those who recognize Allah’s existence and His greatness, love and fear Him, “are steadfast in their duty” to Him and re-orient all their deeds and conduct in the light of this reality which has become apparent to them. Others, by means of contrast, are either those who deny Allah, or, as is similar to the case of the people depicted in the above verse, those who do not perform their duty to Allah, despite their acceptance of His existence.

Throughout their lives, such people foolishly remain entirely oblivious of Allah, the Creator of man. He to Whom they owe their life and how and why they were granted a lifetime on earth are questions with which they illogically do not care to concern themselves with. They envision a kind of life entirely separate from Allah and His religion due to a rationale of their own making. However, the following comparison in the Qur’an makes it clear that such a life rests upon vain and rotten foundations and is doomed to destruction:

Who is better: someone who founds his building on fear of Allah and His approval; or someone who founds his building on the brink of a crumbling precipice, so that it collapses with him into the Fire of Hell? Allah does not love wrongdoers. (Surat at Tawba: 109)

As also stated in the above verse, the lives of those who lack faith, as described in the Qur’an, are founded on the brink of a “crumbling precipice.” The major goal to which unbelievers are committed is the attainment of happiness and peace “in this world.” In this sense, what some most want is to become rich. They do their best to achieve this goal, making all-out physical and mental efforts. For others, on the other hand, becoming a respected and well-known person is the purpose of life; they will do anything and make any sacrifices to earn public respect. However, these are nothing but worldly goals that will vanish once death comes upon them. Some of them may even lose their grasp right here in this world. Moreover, if the people in question achieve these aims, even if they succeed in them throughout their lives, and even if they obtain much more than they had originally planned, their gains will never satisfy them spiritually and they will never find the peace, happiness, love and calm they seek, because true happiness, deep love and inner peace are blessings that can only be acquired through true faith.

A believer, however, is fully aware of Allah’s existence and might. He knows why Allah has created him and what His expectations are of him. For this reason, his basic aim in life is to be a servant with whom Allah is pleased. He employs all means to try to reach his goal, and strives to do so. This being the case, he knows the real meaning of death: for many it means nothing but the ultimate end but for him, death is not extinction under any consideration, but a phase of transition to the real life.

In a most illogical way, some non-believers assume that death, which they take to be an incident that puts an end to their lives, is a “self-generated accident,” just as they assume that life emerged coincidentally and spontaneously. The fact is, however, that Allah creates life and likewise takes it away. Death, which is by no means a coincidence or an accident, is an incident that takes place by the law of Allah at a predestined moment and place.

A sincere believer is a person who grasps that Allah has power over all things and it is He Who creates him and the whole universe, as well as understanding that death is not an end but a transition to the real abode of man (the Hereafter). Aware of these facts, he carefully avoids building his life on a “crumbling precipice.” He turns to Allah, aware that He is the real Lord and Creator of life, death and what lies beyond. In this order created by Allah – and that is also being created all the time- he comprehends that wealth, social status or good looks are not the means that lead man to salvation; they are only “causes” operating under the rules laid down by Allah, which are effective for only a brief period of time.

The foundation of the order that Allah has created is the consent of Allah. That is because Allah guides only those who seek His approval.

... Allah will guide to the ways of peace those who follow what pleases Him. He will bring them by His will from darkness to the light, and will guide them to a straight path. (Surat al-Ma‘ida: 16)

A believer is a believer because he seeks Allah’s approval. This is the most important trait that makes a believer different from all other people. Believers know that religion is the true way to earn Allah’s approval, whereas the majority of people ignorantly consider it to be a system of beliefs which occupies an insignificant portion of their lives. Surely, these people feel the pain of their misconception of this world in all respects. However, the pain that they will experience in the Hereafter is definitely much greater.

Indeed, at this very point there emerges the distinction between real believers and those hypocrites who imitate being believers. Believers live by their faith with enthusiasm, desire and joy, for Allah’s approval, while hypocrites merely engage in a shallow imitation in order to obtain what they imagine to be advantages. Although they do not really believe in the religion and do not live by its moral values, they behave as if they do. That is why a hypocrite’s prayers are of a “pretentious” nature (Surat al-Ma’un: 6) while believers pray in humility (Surat al-Mu’mun: 1-2). Similarly, while believers spend their money in Allah’s cause, hypocrites spend to impress people rather than to earn Allah’s approval.

You who believe! Do not nullify your almsgiving by demands for gratitude or insulting words, like him who spends his wealth, showing off to people and not having faith in Allah and the Last Day. He is like a smooth rock coated with soil, which, when heavy rain falls on it, is left stripped bare. They shall have no power over anything they have earned. Allah does not guide the unbelievers. (Surat al-Baqara: 264)

Due striving for Allah’s Approval

Some people strive hard to attain worldly advantages, on which they set their minds as being the ultimate goal in life. They do their utmost to gain material prosperity, recognition of social status or some other worldly benefit. For “a paltry price” (Surat at-Tawba: 9) that will slip out of their hands in a very short while, they make an all-out effort.

Believers, who aspire to a much greater reward, a blessing which is incomparable to worldly achievements that is, to the approval of Allah and His Garden, also strive hard for their cause. Of this attribute Allah says the following:

He who desires this fleeting existence shall soon receive in it whatever We will: We bestow Our gifts upon whoever We please. But then We will consign him to Hell where he will roast, reviled and helpless. But as for anyone who desires the Hereafter, and strives for it as he ought to, being a believer, his endeavors will be gratefully acknowledged. (Surat al-Isra’: 18-19)

A believer strives with “all due striving” for the approbation of Allah and for the Hereafter. He “sells” his property and his life for the cause of Allah (Surat at-Tawba 111).

No difficulty a believer encounters in the way of Allah undermines his commitment, provided that he has sold “his property and self” to Allah. Nothing but Allah’s approbation has any attraction for him. Aware that he is not the “owner” of his body and property, he never follows the vain desires of his lower self (nafs). Allah is the owner of his body and everything he possesses, and they will be put to service in compliance with Allah’s Will.

This aside, whether one’s determination is serious will also be tested by Allah. A believer must not avoid any struggle on Allah’s path. That is because had been there any question of “easy gains,” hypocrites might also perform any deed which has the appearance of being in compliance with Allah’s Will—and not the actual deed with which Allah will be pleased—to attain this “easy gain”:
If it had been a case of easy gains and a short journey, they would have followed you, but the distance was too great for them. They will swear by Allah: “Had we been able to, we would have gone out with you.” They are destroying their own selves. Allah knows that they are lying. (Surat at-Tawba: 42)

Therefore, one of the criteria for being a believer is to feel a sincere desire to seek Allah’s approval and not to refrain from making any sacrifices on the way of Allah when circumstances call for such sacrifices. Believers are those who are “purified with a pure thought, remembrance of the Home (of the Hereafter)” (Surah Sad: 46). A believer does not seek any benefit other than Allah’s approval. He hopes to please Allah, receive His mercy and attain Paradise, because “anyone, male or female, who does right actions and is a believer, will enter Paradise. They will not be wronged by so much as the tiniest speck.” (Surat an-Nisa’: 124)

As we have seen, Allah provides in the Qur’an an explicit picture of a believer. Paradise is the abode of those who “believe with certainty” in Allah and the Hereafter (Surah Luqman: 4) and then “strive with all due striving” in the way of Allah. The end of those who “worship Allah right on the fringe of true faith” and place their trivial worldly interests right next to the pleasure of Allah is described thus in the Qur’an:

Among the people there are some who profess to serve Allah but who stand on the very fringe of good faith. If good befalls them, they are content, but if an ordeal befalls them, they revert to their former ways, losing both this world and the Hereafter. That way true perdition lies. (Surat al-Hajj: 11)

The believer is careful to maintain the bounds revealed by Allah in the Qur’an and commanded by our Prophet (saas) and behaves with fortitude and moderation on the subject, without regard for his own interests. Nothing can induce him to make concessions when it comes to maintaining Allah’s bounds. He is careful to behave at every moment in the way that Allah will find pleasing. Every person of faith is punctilious when it comes to religious observances and keenly observes such observances as the five prayers, ritual ablution and fasting commanded by Allah. In addition to the commands Allah has issued to all Muslims, there are also special provisions and prohibitions He has revealed to women. One of these is the headscarf. According to the Qur’an, a Muslim woman has a duty to cover her head in the manner revealed in the verses of the Qur’an. This responsibility attendant upon Muslim women is revealed as follows in the Qur’an:

“Say to the believing women that they should lower their eyes and guard their private parts and not display their adornments – except for what normally shows – and draw their head-coverings across their breasts. They should only display their adornments to their husbands or their fathers...” (Surat an-Nur, 31)

The way a woman should dress and be chaste is also explicitly described in the hadiths of our Prophet (saas). Every century, the Islamic scholars of the time have stressed the importance of covering the head and are unanimous on that importance. In his Emirdag Addendum, Bediuzzaman Said Nursi refers to this in the words: “Regarding the head covering, a holy principle of social life for 350 million Muslims in one thousand three hundred and fifty years and every century, and in line with the unanimity in the meanings of the commentaries on this subject for one thousand three hundred and fifty years and in line with the beliefs of our forefathers…” (Emirdağ Addendum, 361). As can be seen from these statements, covering the head is a matter enshrined by verses of the Qur’an and which Islamic scholars have been in agreement at all times.

By behaving punctiliously on the subject of Almighty Allah’s commandment regarding the head covering, Muslim women live respected, honored, peaceful and happy lives in this world and may also hope for a fine reward from Allah in the Hereafter.

Believers are covetous of the Hereafter. Allah promises believers a beautiful endless life in the Hereafter. Our Lord promises believers that He will give a good life to His believing servants in this world, too. Yet this in no way means that they will not encounter any hardship and troubles in this world. The afflictions they encounter are devised to put them to the test and make them more mature.

The obstacles a believer encounters are ostensibly difficult situations; but once met with submission, Allah makes them easy. For instance, when his people attempted to cast the Prophet Abraham (as) into the fire because of his faith, his response was the one peculiar to a believer; he favored being thrown into the fire over abandoning his faith or turning away from Allah’s commands. For someone who simply watches without having faith, being cast into a fire is the most terrible physical suffering that might befall any human being in this world. However, Abraham (as), who faced this trial from Allah in the most submissive manner, was saved from this seemingly agonizing experience by the Will of Allah, and no harm came to him.

He said, “Do you then worship, instead of Allah, what cannot help or harm you in any way? Shame on you and what you worship besides Allah! Will you not use your intellect?” They said, “Burn him and avenge your gods if you are resolved to punish him!” We said, “Fire, be coolness and peace for Abraham!” They sought to trap him but We made them the losers. (Surat al-Anbiya’: 66-70).

The fact that no harm will befall those who are not afraid to lose anything as they strive for the cause of Allah and that they will attain many material and spiritual rewards are underlined in the Qur’an, which extols the faith of believers even when on the brink of defeat in battle:

People said, “Your enemies have gathered a great force against you, so fear them.” But that merely increased their faith and they said, “Allah is enough for us and the Best of Guardians.” So they returned with blessings and bounty from Allah and no evil touched them. They pursued the pleasure of Allah. Allah’s favor is indeed immense. It is satan that prompts men to fear his followers. But do not fear them—fear Me if you are true believers. Do not lament for those who rush headlong into renouncing their faith. They do not harm Allah in any way. Allah intends to assign no portion to them in the Hereafter. They will have a terrible punishment. Those who sell their faith for unbelief do not harm Allah in any way. They will have a painful punishment. (Surah Al ‘Imran: 173-177)

It can be conclusively stated that no distress, difficulty or sorrow affects a believer who seeks Allah’s consent and observes His commands. This is demonstrated in the course of events by which Allah puts a believer’s determination, patience and submission to the test. These are outwardly troublesome and difficult events; but if met with patience and submission they allow the individual to discover Allah’s mercy.

Allah informs us in the Qur’an that He does not burden any soul with more than it can bear:

Allah does not impose on any self any more than it can stand. (Surat al-Baqara: 286)

Allah reveals in the Qur’an that He rewards a believer who duly serves Him most bountifully both in this world and beyond:

When the righteous are asked, “What has your Lord sent down?” their reply is, “That which is best.” There is good in the world for those who do good, but far better is the reward of the life to come. How wonderful is the abode of the righteous: The Gardens of Eden which they enter, with rivers flowing under them, where they shall have whatever they desire. That is how Allah repays the righteous. (Surat an-Nahl: 30-31)

As a reminder from Allah, torment, difficulty and trouble are inflicted on those who fail to seek the approval of Allah, who do not demonstrate absolute submission to Him but rather observe the wishes of their own souls and fail to correct their errors. When believers make a mistake, they consider the trouble and difficulties they suffer as a consequence as a merciful warning from Allah, carefully derive lessons from them, repent and amend their conduct. Disbelievers, however, never learn from the ordeals they undergo, thereby earning eternal torment in the Hereafter.

Knowing One’s Soul

Another very important piece of information Allah provides us with in the Qur’an about man concerns his “soul” (an-nafs). The “soul,” as commonly used in the Qur’an, means “ego” or “one’s personality.”

In the Qur’an, Allah explains the two aspects of the soul: the one inspiring evil and wicked deeds, and the other, guarding against every inculcation of evil. In the Qur’an Allah explains this in Surat ash-Shams:

> By the Soul, and the proportion and order given to it; and its enlightenment as to its wrong and its right; truly, he succeeds that purifies it, and he fails that corrupts it! (Surat ash-Shams: 7-10)

As is evident from the above verses, evil exists in every man’s soul. However, every man also knows how to avoid the evil existing in his soul. He who purifies his soul will attain salvation. Believers do not surrender their selves to the evil in their soul; they simply avoid it with the guidance of Allah’s inspiration. By revealing in the verse in which the Prophet Joseph (as) says: “Not that I am free from sin: man’s soul is prone to evil—except his to whom my Lord has shown mercy…” (Surah Yusuf: 53), Allah provides the right manner of thinking for a believer.
Since the soul “is prone to evil,” a believer must always remain vigilant about his soul. As the Prophet Muhammad (saas) also said, “the greatest struggle is the struggle against one’s lower self (nafs).” The soul unceasingly tempts a person and never earns him Allah’s approval. As it does all these things it tries to present alluring alternatives. A believer, however, by means of his love and fear of Allah in the most sincere manner, is not deceived by this “misleading” attribute of the soul. He always turns towards what is right to lead a life in compliance with Allah’s Will. Such is the attitude of a wise person as opposed to a foolish one, as the Prophet (saas) said:

A wise person is one who keeps a watch over his bodily desires and passions, and checks himself from that which is harmful and strives for that which will benefit him after death; and a foolish person is one who subordinates himself to his cravings and desires and expects from Allah the fulfillment of his futile desires. (Tirmidhi)

Refraining From Idolatry

Very briefly, idolatry is associating other beings with Allah (Surely Allah is beyond that). Seeing this definition, some people may raise the objection, “We certainly do not associate a partner with Allah,” although it may actually be the case that they do. Their failure to grasp the meaning of idolatry accounts for such an objection. Indeed, Allah relates in the Qur’an the case of many people who associate partners with Allah—that is, who are idolaters—yet who never admit the fact:

On the Day We gather them all together, We will say to those who associated others with Allah, “Where are the partner-gods, for whom you made such claims?” Then they will have no recourse except to say, “By Allah, our Lord, We were not idolaters.” (Surat al-An’am: 22-23)

No one must take it for granted that he is totally free from idolatry, and must always pray Allah to keep him from it. That is because idolatry is a great sin. When the Prophet Muhammad (saas) was asked what the greatest sin was, he answered “To associate partners with Allah, while He has created you.” In the Qur’an, Allah states that He may forgive all sins and crimes, except for idolatry:

Allah does not forgive anything being associated with Him, but He forgives whoever He wills for anything other than that. Anyone who associates something with Allah has committed a terrible crime. (Surat an-Nisa’: 48)

The initial point of idolatry, which is such a great “sin and slander,” is ascribing the attributes of Allah to some other being in one’s mind. The fact, however, is that, the attributes (power, intelligence, beauty and so on) found in things do not actually belong to them; they are endowed with these by Allah for a temporary and specified period of time. Assuming these attributes to “belong” to beings other than Allah simply means taking them as gods (Surely Allah is beyond that). This, in turn, is defined as associating the beings in question as partners with Allah, in other words, setting up partners with Allah, which is indeed ignorance.

Allah’s Oneness and Uniqueness is related in the Qur’an as follows:
Say: “He is Allah, Absolute Oneness, Allah, the Everlasting Sustainer of all. He has not given birth and was not born. And no one is comparable to Him.” (Surat al-Ikhlas: 1-4)

As stated in the verse above, Allah is the Provider of everyone; every being is in need of Him to exist. Nothing equals Him. Once this fact is ignorantly denied and people foolishly start thinking that some beings can exist of their own accord without Allah’s sustenance, the distorted belief called idolatry surfaces. With such a mindset, one forgets that every living thing is under the control of Allah. A false belief about the existence of some beings which supposedly do not need Allah emerges. The assumption that such beings can exist leads man to ask them for help, seek their consent and adopt their rules.

Believers, however, who do not associate partners with Allah turn towards only Him since they know that Allah has power over all things. The rationale of believers is stated in the Qur’an as follows:

You alone we worship. You alone we ask for help. (Surat al-Fatiha: 4)

Those who associate partners with Allah in fact turn towards beings that are not capable of helping them. That is because the beings they ignorantly take as deities are also feeble servants like themselves. Of this Allah states the following:

Do they make things into partner-gods which cannot create anything and are themselves created; which are not capable of helping them and cannot even help themselves? If you call them to the right path, they will not follow you. It makes no difference if you call them or stay silent. Those you call on besides Allah are servants just like yourselves. Call on them and let them respond to you if you are telling the truth. (Surat al-A‘raf: 191-194)

Consequently, idolatry is a great slander, a great deception and a very unwise attitude. The unwise conduct of those who associate partners with Allah is described in the Qur’an as follows:

Mankind! An example has been made, so listen to it carefully. Those whom you call upon besides Allah are not even able to create a single fly, even if they were to join together to do it. And if a fly steals something from them, they cannot get it back. How feeble are both the seeker and the sought! They do not measure Allah with His true measure. Allah is All-Strong, Almighty. (Surat al-Hajj: 73-74)

Idolatry appears in different forms. Since people take beings other than Allah as deities, they seek their approval in a perverted manner. People pin their hopes on these deities and regard their judgments as true. This is how a man becomes subservient to millions of imaginary deities. He hopes to find relief in these beings, who are as impotent as himself. However, anyone who associates partners with Allah is at an impasse and his loss is, therefore, very great. This fact is related in the Qur’an as follows:

... Associating others with Him is a terrible wrong. (Surah Luqman: 13)

Yet it must be said that such a man wrongs himself. That is because “Allah does not wrong people in any way; rather it is people who wrong themselves.” (Surah Yunus: 44)
SEEKING THE MOST OF THE GOOD PLEASURE OF ALLAH

A believer is one who has been purified of idolatry and other forms of ignorance, such as placing his hopes in imaginary deities or seeking their approval, thereby becoming subservient to them. He serves Allah alone and seeks the approval of Allah alone. As mentioned earlier, he does this by “striving with all due striving.”

The right manner of “striving with all due striving” on Allah’s way is to seek what pleases Allah most. In the face of several choices, all of which are legitimate, a believer must choose the one he hopes will please Allah most.

This can be briefly described as follows:

- A believer must spend his entire life doing what is “lawful.” In the Qur’an, Allah makes clear which actions are unlawful, and these are indeed very few in number. Anything other than these unlawful deeds is lawful.

- In addition, what a believer must do is attend to the deeds and thoughts that please Allah most. His wisdom and “foresight” guide him in this endeavor.
The example of “spending in the way of Allah” (infaq) will make this theme clearer. A believer is a person who has sold his “property and self” to Allah. He should put whatever he has to use in the way that pleases Allah most. However, he may frequently encounter many choices. Let us assume that he has a considerable amount of money with which he could buy a new suit for himself. This is indeed a legitimate and lawful thing to do; being meticulous about one’s appearance is certainly something in conformity with Allah’s will. However, there may be other things to do with this money which would please Allah more. Giving it to a needy person might well please Allah more. However, this is a decision that rests entirely with the person himself. Considering the specific conditions and environment he is in, he must establish his priorities by consulting his conscience.

Another example will lead to a better understanding of this theme: A believer is responsible for “enjoining good and forbidding evil,” communicating Allah’s religion and waging a struggle on intellectual grounds against the tyrants in the world. Undertaking this all-important responsibility is one way to earn the good pleasure of Allah. Such a responsibility means that certain duties always take precedence. Since there are so many duties demanded by such an important responsibility, it would be incorrect to give priority to any other deed, albeit a legitimate and lawful one. For instance, a man is responsible for taking care of his family; he is the one who provides security and sustenance for the family members. However, using this as an excuse to avoid the responsibility of “enjoining good and forbidding evil” would be conduct unbecoming to a believer.

Indeed, upon reflection, we can see that the “soul” (annafs) is involved when one prefers what is less valuable in the Presence of Allah. Preferring the less valuable to the more valuable in the Presence of Allah is a consequence of setting aside a “share” for one’s soul. In this sense, what one needs to accomplish is not to be guided by one’s soul, but to go all-out to seek the total approval of Allah. Seeking Allah’s consent by a ninety nine percent effort and setting aside a one percent share for the soul may not be acceptable in the eyes of Allah. That is because the person in question has associated his soul with Allah. A mere one percent of idolatry may render his services unacceptable. The situation of those who ascribe partners to any being other than Allah is described as follows:

They assign to Allah a share of the crops and livestock He has created, saying, “This is for Allah,”—as they allege—“and this is for our idols.” Their idols’ share does not reach Allah, whereas Allah’s share reaches their idols! What an evil judgment they make! (Surat al-An’am: 136)

If a person risks his life to protect his family in the event of some injustice done to him, but remains heedless and involves himself with his own business when there is tyranny, oppression and slander against other believers, we can hardly say that he seeks Allah’s approval. Such an attitude indicates man’s inclination towards and submission to his soul (nafs), which is entirely against the Islamic goal of “serving Allah alone.” Furthermore, acting in compliance with the desires of the soul is defined in the Qur’an as setting up partners with Allah:

Have you seen him who has taken his whims and desires to be his god? Will you then be his guardian? (Surat al-Furqan: 43)

A believer, on the other hand, devotes all his possessions and his entire life to Allah. This superior attribute of believers is indicated in the Qur’an as follows:

Say: “My prayer and my rites, my living and my dying, are for Allah alone, the Lord of all the worlds.” (Surat al-An’am: 162)

As for seeking what most pleases Allah, the attitude of some believers in wartime in the days of the Prophet Muhammad (saas) is related in the Qur’an. In the face of two groups of enemies, believers preferred to fight against the weaker of the two. Yet it was Allah’s will that there should be a fight against the stronger. These events are related in the verses as follows:

When Allah promised you that one of the two parties would be yours, you would have preferred the unarmed one, whereas Allah sought to fulfill His promise and to rout the last remnant of the disbelievers. This was so that the Truth should triumph and falsehood be discomfited, even though the evil-doers hated that. (Surat al-Anfal: 7-8)

Finally, Allah made the believers confront the stronger party and led them to the one thing that would please Him most. Ultimately, they triumphed with the help of Allah.

The example related above is an event shaped within the conditions of our Prophet’s (saas) era. Yet the fact remains that in every age Muslims are put to the test through different events. Today, for instance, Muslims must engage in a struggle on intellectual grounds against those who deny the Qur’an and the facts of creation and who strive to sow immorality in society. Muslims should determine the best course to follow in this intellectual struggle they take upon themselves and then carry it through with commitment. Yet, even if one has the strength to undertake this responsibility, if one involves oneself with issues of no great urgency only to satisfy one’s own desires, that will only incur the displeasure of Allah. A believer must scrupulously avoid falling into such a situation.

In any case, such a tendency does not conform to a Muslim’s sense of right conduct. He is someone who has been chosen by Allah and to whom faith has been granted; he is held responsible for extirpating wrongdoing from society, replacing it with peace, and establishing an environment where everyone lives by Allah’s religion. He is responsible for struggling on intellectual grounds for those men, women and children who are oppressed and who say: “Our Lord, take us out of this city whose inhabitants are wrongdoers! Give us a protector from You! Give us a helper from You!...” (Surat an-Nisa: 75)

This theme is not confined to an intellectual struggle only. Throughout his life, a believer must maintain this standpoint in his daily life, his worship and in all the events he encounters.

Meanwhile, we need to bear in mind that the expression, “doing what is most pleasing to Allah” is used to make the theme more comprehensible. Turning away from what pleases Allah most and involving oneself with tasks of secondary importance is in fact displeasing to Allah. Hence, that one thing that pleases Allah most is, under all circumstances, whatever is in accordance with His will. To put it another way, there is no alternative to what pleases Allah most.

Not seeking what will please Allah best, and being contented with less, is actually a consequence of a flawed outlook on the Hereafter. Such an outlook is formed because one thinks one unconditionally deserves Paradise. However, nobody can be assured of such a reward. In the Qur’an, Allah warns even the Prophet (saas) with the verse, “… If Allah willed, He could seal up your heart…” (Surat ash-Shura: 24). This being the case, it is obvious that no one is guaranteed Paradise.

In any case, a sincere believer, as described in the Qur’an, never thinks, in such a wrong way, that he or she definitely deserves Paradise or becomes carried away by this feeling. The true believer typically prays to Allah in “fear and hope.” (Surat al-A’raf, 56)

Those lacking real faith also think they deserve Paradise, because they do not fear Allah as they should and assume that the deeds they do are good. With their flawed rationale, they say, “We will in any case be forgiven.” However, this is an attitude peculiar to those who do not fear Allah as He should be feared. Of the situation of these people Allah states the following:

An evil generation has succeeded them, inheriting the Book, taking the goods of this lower world, and say-
“We will be forgiven.” But if similar goods come to them again they still take them. Has not a covenant been made with them in the Book, that they should only tell the truth about Allah and have they not studied what is in it? The Final Abode is better for those who have fear of Allah. Will you not use your intellect? (Surat al-A’raf: 169)

There are also those who, deceived by the material wealth granted to them in this world, arrive at the erroneous conclusion that Allah loves them, - despite the fact that they do not sincerely turn to Allah and do good deeds, - thereby believing that they too will be welcomed into Paradise—although they harbor doubts about its existence. Allah gives us a relevant example in the Qur’an:

Give them this parable. Once there were two men, to one of whom We gave two gardens of grape-vines and surrounded them with date-palms, putting between them some cultivated land. Both gardens yielded their crops and did not suffer any loss, and We made a river flow right through the middle of them. He was a man of wealth and property and he said to his companion, which conversing with him, “I have more wealth than you and my clan is mightier than yours.” He entered his garden and wronged himself by saying, “I do not think that this will ever end. I do not think the Hour of Doom will ever come. But if I should be sent back to my Lord, I will definitely get something better in return.” (Surat al-Kahf: 32-36)

In contrast to people with such a mindset, a believer fears “going astray after being guided to the right path.” The prayer of believers is related in the Qur’an as follows:
Our Lord, do not cause our hearts to go astray after You have guided us. And grant us mercy. You are the Ever-Giving. (Surah Al ‘Imran: 8)

However, it is also worth mentioning that this is not the kind of fear that arouses dread or uneasiness in a believer’s heart. On the contrary, fear of Allah motivates believers to have zeal in striving to be servants who deserve to enter Paradise and ensures that they spend the life of this world in the best way possible.

A believer aims at earning the approval of Allah in the life of this world, which is inherently temporary and short. His thoughts concentrate on a single great event that will happen soon: he will certainly die one day and give an account of his deeds in the Presence of Allah. This will lead him either to eternal terrible ruin or to eternal salvation. It would certainly be unwise to pursue some other course or to remain heedless while there is such a great event ahead of him.

For his salvation, a believer is responsible for seeking “what pleases Allah most.” Failing to do so means being unaware of the danger waiting ahead. In the face of the humiliation one will face in Hell and in the Presence of Allah, it is surely essential to seek “what pleases Allah most.”

A few examples of the attitude one displays in the face of dangers that one may encounter in this world and the efforts one makes to deal with them will lead to a better understanding of how one seeks what pleases Allah most:

- Assume that you are face to face with a giant torrent and the water level is rising rapidly. In this situation, would you run to the top of a 10-story building to save yourself, or remain on the fifth-floor and say, “This place is high enough to save me”?

- Let’s assume that there is a lift that can take you to the top floor. This lift is not free of charge and it will operate only once. You have just the right amount of money to take you to the top floor. Would you give all the money you have to go to the top, or remain at a lower story which is vulnerable to the torrent?

- Again, let’s assume that there is a party being held on the sixth-floor, where you have taken refuge. Would you attend the party or strive to find a way to the top floor?

- As another example, let’s assume that one of your close friends has had a heart attack and he or she must immediately be taken to the emergency room. In this situation, would you drive as fast as you can, or not drive so fast and say, “This is fast enough, he or she will have to hang on”?

As is apparent from the examples above, in the face of danger, a man becomes vigilant and does his utmost to be saved from it. The biggest threat to man is Hell. One of the most important goals of a person who seeks what pleases Allah most is his inner inclination to avoid this danger.

For a moment, let’s assume that you are on the edge of Hell, around which people will be gathered on the Day of Judgement and witness its stunning images... Having seen Hell, would you not choose what pleases Allah most out of a number of alternatives?

Once a person is sent to Hell, he will no longer have the opportunity to make choices but will only give an account of his deeds. This being the case, one must already start acting in that light. Indeed, a believer always acts in the light of the idea of the nearness of Hell, considering that he can, at any moment, go to the Hereafter. On numerous occasions Allah reveals in the Qur’an the fact that any regret felt in the Hereafter will be in vain. One of the relevant verses is as follows:

There they will shout out: “Our Lord! Take us out! We will act rightly, differently from the way we used to act!” But He will answer: “Did We not let you live long enough for anyone who was going to pay heed? And did not the warner come to you? Have a taste of it then! There shall be no helper for the wrongdoers.” (Surah Fatir: 37)

On the other hand, just as we strive to stay away from danger, we need to devote similar and even greater efforts to attaining blessings. It is surely unwise to feel contented with having less in Paradise. When leaving an island abounding in gold, would you not take as much gold as possible with you if you had the opportunity? When the time comes to depart this world, a believer should not feel regret and say, “I wish I had done such and such a thing” or “I wish I had gained the rewards from doing a particular righteous deed.” To avoid this situation, he should be cautious to choose what pleases Allah most.

Disbelievers do their best to “make the most” of their lives, which is nothing but “a brief enjoyment” (Surah Al ‘Imran: 197). While this “brief enjoyment” is doomed to a bitter end, Allah promises His approval, mercy and Paradise for believers. A believer, who wishes to avail himself of these promises of Allah, must strive hard to seek what most pleases Him.

The Key to the Approval of Allah: Conscience

In the face of several choices, a believer must choose the one with which Allah will be most pleased. In this, conscience is the most important criterion that will guide him to the correct choice. Allah’s Messenger, the Prophet Muhammad (saas), drew attention to the importance of conscience during a conversation with a man:

_A person asked Allah’s Messenger (peace be upon him): “What is faith?” He said: “When a good deed becomes a source of pleasure for you and an evil deed becomes a source of disgust for you, then you are a believer.” He again said to Allah’s Messenger: “What is a sin?” Whereupon he said: “When something pricks your conscience, give it up.” (Tirmidhi)_

One of the most important differences between a believer and a disbeliever is that while the believer will follow his conscience, the disbeliever will comply with his soul, which inspires evil deeds. Consequently, a believer displays his most natural state when he heeds his conscience.

However, it is by no means true that a believer is immune to the temptations of the self. In the Qur’an, Allah reveals that the Prophet Joseph (as) said, “The self indeed commands to evil acts...” (Surah Yusuf: 53) Accordingly, it will command alternatives that are against Allah’s Will.

A believer avoids the tricks of his soul by means of his conscience. Faced with a choice, a believer initially tends to select the one that first occurs to him, which is generally the one that pleases Allah most. Then, the self intervenes:
it foolishly tries to make other alternatives seem more alluring and finds pretexts to legitimize them. A believer must disregard these pretexts and comply with the initial and absolutely correct choice to which his conscience leads him.

Loving for Allah’s Sake

That is the good news (the promise of Paradise) which Allah gives to His servants who believe and do right actions. Say: “I do not ask you for any recompense for this [but] only good will through kinship. If anyone does a good action, he shall be repaid many times over. Allah is Ever-Forgiving, Ever-Thankful.” (Surat ash-Shura: 23)

A believer devotes his entire life to Allah. He lives for Allah, works for Allah and loves for Allah’s sake.

“Loving for Allah’s sake” might be an incomprehensible theme to someone who is not well acquainted with the true Islam. One who has remained distant from Allah throughout his life, and who has therefore not known Him, will be unaware of how to love Allah intuitively.

However, a believer who knows Allah and witnesses
His mercy to him, who recognizes that everything he loves is His blessing and that he owes his existence and life to His mercy, loves Allah and attains the noble spirit of loving for the sake of Allah. In the Qur’an, the great difference between believers and other people in this sense is set out as follows:
Some people set up equals to Allah, loving them as they should love Allah. But those who believe have greater love for Allah... (Surat al-Baqara: 165)

As stated in the verse above, those who associate partners with Allah and who, in their own minds, ascribe all attributes of Allah to other beings, love these beings as they should love Allah. This is the kind of love that is based on idolatry.

Aware that everything belongs to Allah and that every being’s existence is consequential upon Allah’s creation, believers love Allah most. This great feature, which is a natural consequence of the believer’s recognition of Allah as the One and Only Supreme Being, makes him completely different from other people. This quality of believers is set out in one of the sayings of the Prophet Muhammad (saas):

Whoever has three things discovers the sweetness of faith: that Allah and His Messenger are more beloved to him than all else, that he loves another only for the sake of Allah Most High, and that he hates to return to disbelief as he would hate to be thrown into fire.” (Muslim and Bukhari)

Those who associate partners with Allah, on the other hand, cannot stand the remembrance of Allah:

...When you mention your Lord alone in the Qur’an, they turn their backs and run away. (Surat al-Isra’: 46)

However, it is worthy of mention that remembering Allah next to their idols may not disturb idolaters. The rationale thus expressed: “We are believers, but we can enjoy our day as well” is at the basis of their thinking. The believer, however, grasps the following fact:
Nothing (be it a human being, a thing or an event, etc.) has a beauty of its own. Allah creates all things and endows them with beauty. Since a person, for example, has not designed and formed his or her face himself, that beauty is a beauty that belongs to Allah.

Allah gives this beauty to man, whom he created from nothing, for a brief time only (since that person will soon grow old and die). Only Allah possesses the power to recreate that beauty in the Hereafter, in an even more perfect form.

As in the case of a human being, all creatures that deserve love are created by Allah and made “pretty.” To remind people that the actual owner of this beauty is Allah, He destines the beauty of these beings to perish with death and ultimately with Doomsday. In the Hereafter, all beings will be recreated.

This being the case, a believer loves all the things he encounters in this world, aware that they all belong to Allah and that he will encounter the “original” form of their beauty in the Hereafter. Consequently, his actual love is for Allah, the One Who provides him with everything he loves: He is the real Owner of every kind of beauty.

Contrary to the concept of love based upon faith in Allah that is enjoyed by believers, disbelievers’ love is based on idolatry. This form of love is described in the following verse revealing what the Prophet Abraham (as) said to his people:

He said, “You have adopted idols apart from Allah as tokens of mutual affection in this world. But then on the Day of Rising you will reject one another and curse one another. The Fire will be your shelter. You will have no helpers.” (Surat al-‘Ankabut: 25)

Said Nursi, also known as Bediuzzaman (the Wonder of the Age), one of the greatest Islamic scholars of the 20th century, likens this form of love to that of a man who looks at the Sun through a mirror held in his hand. Once the mirror is broken into pieces and light is no longer reflected from it, the man feels profound distress at having lost a source of light. However, he is not intelligent enough to realize that the light in the mirror does not actually originate from it. The light comes from the Sun; mirrors only reflect it.

A believer shows all his love for Allah. Loving Allah means to love beings, aware that they reflect the attributes of Allah and that these attributes actually belong to Him, as in the case of the mirrors.

Consequently, a believer shows his love for Allah by loving believers who make “manifest” the attributes of Allah in their manner and conduct, and who display the moral values foreseen to be good by Allah. This form of love is not based on kinship, race or any kind of interest. Due to the love felt for Allah, it is solely a matter of loving those who love Allah. In the Qur’an, our Lord describes the love between believers by referring to the love between the companions of the Prophet Muhammad (saas) in his time:

Those who were already settled in the abode, and in faith, before they came, love those who have emigrated to them and do not find in their hearts any need for what they have been given, but prefer them to themselves, even if they themselves are needy. It is the people who are safe-guarded from the avarice of their own selves who are successful. (Surat al-Hashr: 9)

In the Qur’an it is made clear that the love felt for believers has been specially granted to them by Allah:

As for those who believe and do right actions, the All-Merciful will bestow His love on them. (Surah Maryam: 96)

“John, observe the Book with firm resolve.” We gave him judgment, tenderness and purity while still a child, and he went in fear of Allah. (Surah Maryam: 12-13)

Believers sincerely and passionately love only Allah and those who place their faith in Him. This being the case, they have no love for anybody who rebels against Allah. Allah recalls this in the following verses of the Qur’an:

You who believe! Do not take My enemy and your enemy as friends, showing love for them when they have rejected the truth that has come to you, driving the Messenger and yourselves out of your city simply because you believe in Allah your Lord. If you go out to struggle in My Way and seeking My pleasure, keeping secret the love you have for them, I know best what you conceal and what you make known. Any of you who do that have strayed from the right way. (Surat al-Mumtahana: 1)

You have an excellent example in Abraham and those with him, when they said to their people, “We wash our hands of you and all that you worship apart from Allah, and we reject you. Between us and you there will be enmity and hatred for ever unless and until you have faith in Allah alone...” (Surat al-Mumtahana: 4)

You who believe, do not befriend your fathers or your brothers if they prefer disbelief to faith. Those among you who do befriend them are wrongdoers. (Surat at-Tawba: 23)

You will not find people who believe in Allah and the Last Day on friendly terms with anyone who opposes Allah and His Messenger, even though they be their fathers, their sons, their brothers or their nearest kins... (Surat al-Mujadala: 22)

As the verses above make clear, the love of a believer rests on no other criterion than the “love felt for Allah.” Setting aside all factors such as kinship or material wealth, this love is deeply rooted in faith and noble values. A believer has love for those whose faith is assured rather than for those possessing fame, money or social status, which are only seemingly important.

Having purified his feelings of love of factors other than “the love felt for Allah,” a believer loves the one who fears Allah most and who is most attentive to seeking His pleasure. The more one has of the attributes peculiar to a believer, the more one is cherished by believers. In the Qur’an, too, we witness believers holding most dear the Prophet (saas)—the one who is nearest to Allah and the one who fears Allah most:

The Prophet has closer ties to the believers than they have to each other... (Surat al-Ahzab: 6)
Since a believer’s understanding of love is based on faith, he will also establish his marriage on the same grounds. At this stage, too, there emerges an all-important difference between believers and disbelievers: disbelievers often base their marriage on mutual material benefits. This is especially true of women, who try to find a “prosperous man” in the expectation of a high standard of living. For such a purpose, a young girl may easily agree to be the life-long spouse of someone for whom she has no affection. This is, in fact, similar to a commercial agreement from which both parties derive benefits. The only difference is that this agreement is purported to be a life-long one. But this state of affairs is never permanent and consequently the marriages are short-lived.

The examples of such marriages are legion. There are many young people who marry partners who are rich or old or who are known for their immorality, solely because they are wealthy or famous.

Marriages of disbelievers are not always based on material benefits. There are also many young people who seek “good looks” or attractiveness in the person they want to marry. Such girls marry men who have nothing but physical charm, who they assume to be a “knight on a white horse.”

Yet the rationale behind this viewpoint neglects one crucial fact: all these physical traits are eventually doomed to perish. All human beings will eventually grow old. Furthermore, Allah can take back someone’s fortune, good looks or health in a moment. Similarly, it takes but a few seconds to have an accident and become paralyzed, bed-ridden or lose one’s good looks. Under such conditions, what would become of such a marriage?

What would a woman do if her husband was blinded in an accident, for instance, if she married him because he had beautiful eyes? Most probably she would only then realize the irrational basis upon which her most important decision has been made.

A believer aims at eternal Paradise in the Hereafter. His life is intended to gain the approval of Allah and to attain “salvation and happiness.” Having devoted all his prayers and his entire life to Allah, he will surely also devote his marriage to Allah.

A marriage entered into to gain Allah’s approval is surely entirely different from one based on “idolatry.” In such a marriage, the criteria can never be money, fame or beauty. The sole purpose in marrying will be to gain Allah’s approval. The true believer would like to marry someone who will be most instrumental in making him or her earn Allah’s approval. Consequently, he or she only marries such a person as displays a deep loyalty to Allah and is superior in faith and piety (taqwa).

For the reason set out above, certain women who lived during the time of the Prophet Muhammad (saas) expressed a desire to marry the Prophet (saas). Those who preferred otherwise are described in the Qur’an as desiring “the life of the world and its finery”:

Prophet, tell your wives: “If you desire the life of the world and its finery, come and I will give you all you need and release you with kindness. But if you desire Allah and His Messenger and the abode of the Hereafter, Allah has prepared an immense reward for those among you who do good works.” (Surat al-Ahzab: 28-29)

Attributes of Believers

One who lives by the Qur’an will also love others who live by the Qur’an, that is, believers. Due to their faith in Allah, believers are granted some attributes that make them worthy of love. A believer will also seek these attributes in other believers and, witnessing these attributes in them, will duly cherish them.

The following are the notable attributes of believers as explained in the Qur’an:

• Believers serve Allah only. There is no being that they have idolized in their minds but Him. (Surat al-Fatiha: 1-7; Surat an-Nisa’: 36)

• They fear Allah. They refrain from doing anything that Allah has forbidden or that is contrary to the Will of Allah. (Surah Al ‘Imran: 102; Surah Ya Sin: 11; Surat at-Taghabun: 16; Surat az-Zumar: 23)

• They trust Allah alone. (Surat al-Baqara: 249; Surat at-Tawba: 25-26)

• They fear no one but Allah. (Surat al-Ahzab: 39)

• They always feel grateful to Allah. Prosperity or destitution does not lead them to be boastful or to feel sorry for themselves. (Surat al-Baqara: 172; Surat al-Isra’: 3; Surah Ibrahim: 7)

• They have certainty in their faith. The thought of turning away from earning the approval of Allah does not even occur to them. They unceasingly render their services with ever-increasing zeal and ardor. (Surat al-Hujurat: 15; Surat al-Baqara: 4)

• They are committed to the Qur’an. They orient all their deeds in compliance with the moral values in the Qur’an. They immediately disown an attitude once they realize it is not in conformance with the teachings of the Qur’an. (Surat al-A’raf: 170; Surat al-Ma’ida: 49; Surat al-Baqara: 121)

• They remember Allah continually. They know that Allah is ever the Hearer and Seer of everything, and always keep in mind the eternal might of Allah. (Surah Al’Imran: 191; Surat ar-Ra’d: 28; Surat an-Nur: 37; Surat al-A’raf: 205; Surat al-‘Ankabut: 45)

• They know their weakness before Allah. They are humble. (However, this does not mean they are weak and thus display unconfident attitudes towards people.) (Surat al-Baqara: 286; Surat al-A’raf: 188)

• They know nothing will happen to them, except what Allah has decreed. They do not become overwrought about anything and always remain calm and put their trust in Allah. (Surat at-Tawba: 51; Surat at-Taghabun: 11; Surah Yunus: 49; Surat al-Hadid: 22)

• They turn towards the Hereafter; their main target is the Hereafter. They also benefit from worldly blessings and aspire to an environment in this world very similar to Paradise. (Surat an-Nisa’: 74; Surah Sad: 46; Surat al-A’raf: 31-32)

• They take only Allah and believers as their friends and intimates. (Surat al-Ma’ida: 55-56; Surat al-Mujadala: 22)

• They are the people endued with understanding.
Never losing their consciousness of worshipping, they remain cautious and vigilant at every moment. They always render services which are in the interests of believers and religion. (Surat al-Mu’min: 54; Surat az-Zumar: 18)

- They strive to the utmost in the way of Allah. They struggle with disbelievers on intellectual grounds, especially with the leaders of disbelief. They never feel frustrated or weak-hearted in this struggle. (Surat al-Anfal: 39; Surat al-Hajj: 78; Surat al-Hujurat: 15; Surat at-Tawba: 12)
- They do not hesitate to speak the truth. They do not refrain from telling the truth because of their fear of others. They do not mind rejecters’ ridiculing and attacking them and are fearless of human censure. (Surat al-Ma’ida: 54, 67; Surat al-A’raf: 2)

Oppression against Believers

The attributes of believers stated above are actually designated along two themes:

The first are those beautiful attributes which believers display of their own volition; these include being a servant to Allah, self-sacrifice and modesty.

The second, however, are those which they evince in matters beyond their control, e.g. the plots devised against them or their being mocked by disbelievers. In fact, these are very important in enabling one to identify sincere believers. That is because many of the attributes displayed by believers are of an “imitable” nature. For instance, a hypocrite can also practice every act of worship - like performing prayers five times every day - or make sacrifices, provided that he gains from doing so. But the attributes displayed in situations beyond their control are “non-imitable,” e.g. when disbelievers subject sincere believers to oppression.
This being the case, these attributes acquire great importance in one’s evaluation of believers. To understand whether a community is one of sincere believers, these criteria, the immutable laws of Allah as explained in the Qur’an, have to be taken into consideration.

While evaluating verbal oppression and slanders against Muslims, the events that befell Muslims in the past should be our reference point. In this sense, in the Qur’an Allah gives an account of the difficulties and slanders encountered by the early Muslims:

Or did you suppose that you would enter the Garden without facing the same as those who came before you?... (Surat al-Baqara: 214)

In the verses in which “trials that came to those who passed away in the past” are related, we come across a noteworthy situation. The enemies of prophets and believers did not say: “These people believe in Allah and seek His approval” or “These people are not immoral like us, they possess noble values.” On the contrary, they foolishly tried to slander believers and accused them in the most unbecoming manner due to a rationale of their own making.

Certainly, they would not dare to say: “We are rebellious against Allah and we do not observe any moral limits; we just want to oppress these people who do not serve to benefit us.” It would be unwise to expect these people to make confessions such as: “These are the people who observe Allah’s commands, whereas we are transgressors.” On the contrary, due to their distorted mentality, they would strive to legitimize their slanders by malign-ing believers and presenting themselves as “decent and honest” people. In the stories related in the Qur’an, we see the very same method being employed against the believers of the past.

For example, the Prophet Noah (as)—like all the other prophets—summoned his people to serve Allah alone. An order established on the basis of serving Allah alone surely hampered the advancement of the interests of the leaders of the society, who acquired wealth and status through a system of disbelief. Surely these leaders would not agree to say that what Noah (as) demanded was not in their interests. On the contrary, they cast aspersions on him by accusing him of pursuing his own interests—“status and prestige.” Our Lord gives an account of this situation in the Qur’an as follows:

We sent Noah to his people and he said, “My people, worship Allah. You have no deity other than Him. So will you not take heed?” The ruling circle of those of his people who were disbelievers said: “This is nothing but a human being like yourselves who simply wants to gain ascendancy over you…” (Surat al-Mu’minun: 23-24)

The Prophet Moses (as) and the Prophet Aaron (as) were exposed to the same illogical accusation. In the Qur’an, Allah reveals that Pharaoh and his close circle said to them: “Have you come to us to turn us away from what we found our fathers doing, and to gain greatness in the land? We do not believe you.” (Surah Yunus: 78)

The slanders made against believers may reach an unimaginable scale. Throughout history, Allah’s messengers have been accused of “bewitching and deceiving” the believers around them:

They said, “These two magicians (Moses and Aaron) desire by their magic to expel you from your land and abolish your most excellent way of life.” (Surah Ta Ha: 63)

... The disbelievers say, “This is a lying magician.” (Surah Sad: 4)

The main ambition of those who slander Muslims is to present an image of a Muslim who has the same vices that they themselves display. This went to such great lengths that they dared to call the noble Prophet Noah (as) as a liar: “He is an insolent liar!” (Surat al-Qamar: 25). By saying this they proved that they are indeed the liars themselves.

Another slander that believers are very often exposed to is that of “insanity.” In fact, disbelievers’ failure to grasp one important rationale of believers accounts for this slander. Having no concept of “earning the approval of Allah,” disbelievers have difficulty in understanding the acts of believers that are aimed at this goal alone. Due to their distorted perspective, they fail to comprehend why believers, who obviously pursue no interests of their own for the services they render, devote their lives to Allah. According to their superstitious point of view, such an idealistic attitude can be nothing but “insanity.” Throughout history, they have often employed this slander. As Allah reveals in the Qur’an of the Prophet Moses (as), Pharaoh said: “This Messenger, who has been sent to you, is mad.” (Surat ash-Shu’ara’: 27) Also, when denying the Prophet Noah (as), his people said, “He is a madman.” (Surat al-Qamar: 9).

Leaving these aside, believers were also exposed to another slander which is adultery. The Prophet Joseph (as) and Mary (as), the role models to follow for all faithful men and women, are noble people who were exposed to this slander. Furthermore, disbelievers foolishly accused many prophets of “being in plain error.” (Surat al-A’raf: 60).

But it would not be correct to assume that all these events pertain to the past. In the Qur’an, it is revealed that other believers may have the very same experiences. Accordingly, each believer advocating the true religion, thereby disturbing those who are far removed from the values of that religion, is vulnerable to the same accusations and slanders.

We need to keep in mind that what disbelievers spread about Muslims may be part of such a slander campaign. As Allah advises in the verse below, prior to extensive investigation, we must avoid believing in such news spread by “deviators.” Of this Allah warns us as follows:

You who believe! If a deviator brings you a report, scrutinize it carefully in case you attack people in ignorance and so come to greatly regret what you have done. (Surat al-Hujurat: 6)
In the earlier sections of this book, we mentioned that the main difference between believers and disbelievers is the formers’ awareness of Allah’s infinite might. We also talked about how a believer who sincerely believes in Allah’s existence must and does orient his entire life to earn the approval of Allah.

One of the most significant characteristics of someone who can appreciate Allah’s might and thus orients all his deeds to earn Allah’s blessing is his steadfastness in earning the good pleasure and blessing of Allah at each moment of his life. Having his life focused on earning His approval and being a servant to Him, he develops a different outlook on the universe, which he knows is created and controlled by Allah. Since he considers Allah as the only Deity, the false deities surrounding him lose their meaning.

In the Qur’an, this subject is stressed in the story of the Prophet Abraham (as) as revealed to the Prophet Muhammad (saas):

... He was a saintly man and a Prophet. Remember when he said to his father, “Father, why do you worship what can neither hear nor see and is not of any use to you at all?” (Surah Maryam: 41-42)

Since a believer seeks the pleasure of Allah alone, prays to Him, and beseeches only Him, he turns solely towards Him. He does not feel the need to seek other people’s approval, and does not pin his hopes on anyone other than Allah. The attainment of true freedom is, in fact, possible only through having a full grasp of this fact and turning towards Allah.

The lives of those lacking true faith, unlike those of believers, are subservient to countless false deities. Such individuals devote their entire lives to gaining the approval of countless people, and when they seek help, it is from other people. In reality, however, the creatures a disbeliever ignorantly idolizes in his mind are nothing but weak “servants,” just like himself. Indeed, these beings are far from fulfilling his desires, much less saving him. Death is, no doubt, the most obvious fact, revealing that these idolized beings cannot be of any help. However, it will be too late to wait until death to grasp the imaginary nature of these deities.

The insuperable dilemma these people face is related in the Qur’an as follows:

They have taken [other] gods besides Allah [Alone], hoping that they may be helped. They cannot help them, even though they are an army mobilized in their support. (Surah Ya Sin: 74-75)

Disbelievers base their entire lives on this very distorted rationale. Another important difference between believers and disbelievers emerges from this: believers adopt the criteria laid down by Allah as their only guidance. They observe the commands of the Qur’an, the just Book and the Sunnah of the Prophet (saas). Their religion is Islam, which is explained in detail in the Qur’an and is presented to us through the exemplary of the life of the Prophet (saas).

People who lead their lives in a state oblivious of Allah will surely accept the criteria laid down by imaginary deities rather than the criteria set forth by Allah. They will follow, not Islam, the true faith, but a false faith with superstitious ideas and beliefs. Their religion is a heretical one with many deities. These people have various conflicting rules and goals imposed by society and which are indeed highly superstitious. This being the case, the polytheistic religions they abide by take various forms. However, it needs to be stated that it is very important and necessary for a person to abide by the social order in which he lives and comply with its rules and law. What is being referred to here is not social rules that encourage truth, goodness, love and respect, but superstitious values that encourage self-interest, selfishness, lovelessness and ruthlessness.

Some of them aim at money and power, while others desire a prestigious and influential status. Some aspire to find a “good spouse” and have a “happy family life.” These are all elements in a believer’s life. But a true believer attaches no more importance to them than is proper. More importantly, he has no conceptions or judgments on these subjects apart from those commanded by Allah in the Qur’an and recommended by our Prophet (saas).
People who do not live by religious moral values, however, have their own paths and methods to achieve such aims as they set themselves that are incompatible with religious moral values. All these superstitious conceptions that they call ‘life style’ make up the superstitious religions based on the failure to grasp Allah’s existence and His limits.

However, man is, by nature, inclined to trust Allah and be a servant to Him. Unable to fulfill his infinite needs and desires by himself, by nature, he tends to turn to Allah alone. Accordingly, the nature of man is inclined to recognize Allah as his Lord:

So, as a pure and natural believer, set your face firmly towards the faith, Allah’s natural pattern on which He made mankind. There is no changing Allah’s creation. That is the true faith—but most people do not know it. (Surat ar-Rum: 30)

A sincere believer, who is not seized by the evil desires of his soul but who has faith in Allah, learns how to conduct himself throughout his life from the book revealed by Allah, our Prophet’s (saas) Sunnah and follows the prophets as his role models. The life of a believer is entirely different from that of a disbeliever. This aside, from the Qur’an and the Sunnah of the Prophet Muhammad (saas) a believer learns facts of which disbelievers are utterly unaware. For example, Allah has imparted the glad tidings that for whoever observes his duty to Allah, He will provide a means of salvation:

... Whoever goes in fear of Allah—He will give him a way out and provide for him from where he does not expect. Allah is all-sufficient for one who puts his trust in Him. Allah always achieves His aim. Allah has set a measure for all things. (Surat at-Talaq: 2-3)

A believer who duly acknowledges the power of Allah will dedicate his life to Him, because he knows that Allah will be enough for “whoever puts his trust in Him.” This is expressed in the following verse:

He (Jacob) said, “My sons!... in no way can I save you from the might of Allah, for judgment comes from no one but Allah. In Him I put my trust, and in Him alone let the faithful put their trust.” (Surah Yusuf: 67)

A believer who grasps this fact will see that his duty in this world is solely to fulfill Allah’s commands. This is his duty and his “profession.” He is merely responsible for striving in the way of Allah. He asks Allah for everything, because it is Allah Who gives everything to him. The purpose behind man’s creation is thus recorded in the Qur’an:

I only created jinn and man to worship Me. I do not require any provision from them and I do not require them to nourish Me. Truly Allah, He is the Provider, the Possessor of Strength, the Sure. (Surat adh-Dhariyat: 56-58)

Consequently, it is unlikely that a believer, who displays the morals praised in the Qur’an, can have a “fear of the future” in his heart. This fear is peculiar to those who perceive life as a struggle among millions of independent false deities. Unaware that all events take place under Allah’s control, in compliance with a destiny that is totally defined by Him, they assume that they need to put up a struggle to survive. They believe that they will benefit by “treading on others” and “abusing them” to achieve their own ends and satisfy their personal interests. Indeed, their thinking matches what they receive…

Said Nursi explains how man fails to understand that his real duty is to be a servant to Allah and adds:

“… They unwisely concluded that life is a struggle.”

This rationale, subscribed to by those who do not live according to the values of the Qur’an, is one of the fundamental tenets of their religion. It is due to the distorted rationale in question that these people always suffer feelings of distress and tension:

- The majority of these people, unlike believers, are selfish, self-seeking people whose only concern is to benefit themselves.

- They lack the delicate disposition that develops with self-sacrifice. Their love is based on gaining advantage; they love a person not because of his good values or attributes but because it is in their interest to love him.

- Those whom they consider to be their loved ones, too, approach them with the same mindset, which creates a relationship bereft of loyalty. They always feel concerned about the potential unfaithfulness of their partners, since they know that at any time their partners may find others who are wealthier or more beautiful...

- They are consumed by jealousy, a trait that prevents them from taking pleasure in beauties and blessings. For example, instead of taking pleasure in someone’s beauty and saying “How beautifully Allah has created him or her,” they feel restless and ask, “Why am I not as good looking and beautiful as him or her?”
- They do not feel grateful to Allah or are not content with their blessings. With such a disposition, they always want to possess more. This insatiable desire becomes a constant source of unease.

- Unable to accept their feebleness and weaknesses, they do not ask for help from Allah. They assume they will get rid of their weaknesses if they turn away from Allah haughtily and without asking Him for help. However, this is not the way to get rid of their weaknesses. At this time, too, they turn to others and pin their hopes on them. Yet those they turn to are also weak individuals who only think of their own benefit. Moreover, they are far from being merciful and compassionate. This being the case, they often feel “depressed,” and lose their spirit through a failure to satisfy their expectations.

- They lack forgiveness and understanding. For this reason, even a minor disagreement among them is likely to develop into a clash or conflict. Most of the time, each party makes it a matter of pride to refuse to accept being the one in the wrong. For this reason, they have great fights.

- They do not believe that they live in a world under Allah’s protection and control, but rather in a ruthless jungle where they have to “defeat” others to survive. According to their misguided ideas, they assume they have to develop a tough, aggressive and egoistical character to be able to survive in this “jungle.” Indeed, their attitude matches what they encounter. They are either, as the society of ignorance calls it, swallowed up, as in the example of the “small fish,” or they grow into a “big and cruel” fish and swallow others.
These laws apply to almost all societies where people do not experience true faith but behave according to the mistaken morality described above. In the Qur’an, these societies are called “ignorant,” because they are entirely unaware of Allah and the Hereafter.

In the Qur’an, it is stated that the Prophet Moses (as) described some of the sons of Israel, a tribe that never exercised wisdom or submitted themselves to Allah, as ignorant:

We led the tribe of Israel across the sea and they came upon some people who were devoting themselves to some idols which they had. They said, “Moses, give us a god just as these people have gods.” He said, “You are indeed an ignorant people. What these people are doing is destined for destruction. What they are doing is purposeless.” He said, “Should I seek something other than Allah as a deity for you when He has favored you over all other beings?” (Surat al-A’raf: 138-140)

However, as mentioned earlier, “the society of ignorance” is not of a uniform nature. Though generally called “ignorant,” there may be different sections in a given society, all displaying varying characteristics. The society is commonly segmented according to the degree they have attained ineffective criteria—economic power being the foremost—set by the society itself.
The Criterion by Which to Appraise People in the Society of “Ignorance”

Sincere believers take “taqwa” (awe or fear of Allah which inspires the individual to be on guard against wrong actions and eager for ones which please Him) as the only criterion by which to appraise people. As the Prophet Muhammad (saas) said, they know that “the most perfect man in his faith among the believers is the one whose behavior is most excellent.” (Tirmidhi) In ignorant societies, however, which are made up of people with no faith, “money” is considered the main criterion by which to form an opinion of others:

This being the case, many distorted rationales appear in ignorant societies:

- A rich person, albeit indecent and corrupted, is honored and paid respect.
- Due to this rule laid down by society, one who is “rich but immoral” actually believes himself to be an “estimable” person.
- Because society attaches so much importance to “money,” the poor lack self-confidence. This attitude of the poor becomes most obvious when they are among the rich. A poor person may well recognize that he is superior to the rich man next to him because the latter is depraved. However, under the influence of ideas instilled by society, he is unable to overcome his feelings of inadequacy.
- In the society of ignorance, where the possession of “money” is a highly estimable criterion, moral degeneration prevails. Such corruption appears in various forms, such as bribery, abuse of authority or forgery, and is almost totally incorporated into daily life. Since the successful amassing of money is the most important value according to these people of ignorance, all methods rendering the making of money possible, no matter how immoral and unjust they may be, are legitimized.

In the story of Qarun in the Qur’an, Allah describes the “money-oriented” stance of the society of ignorance:

Qarun was one of the people of Moses but he lorded it over them. We gave him such treasures that their very keys would have been too heavy a weight for a band of strong men. When his people said to him, “Do not gloat. Allah does not love people who gloat. Seek the abode of the Hereafter with what Allah has given you, without forgetting your share in this world. And do good as Allah has been good to you. And do not seek to cause corruption in the land. Allah does not love corrupters.” he said: “I have only been given these riches because of the knowledge I have.” Did he not know that before him Allah had destroyed generations with far greater strength than his and far more possessions? The evil-doers will not be questioned about their sins. He went out among his people in all his finery. Those who desired the life of the world said: “Oh! If only we had the same as Qarun has been given! What immense good fortune he possesses.” But those who had been given knowledge said: “Woe to you! Allah’s reward is better for those who have faith and act rightly. But only the steadfast will attain it.” We caused the earth to swallow up both him and his house. There was no group to come to his aid, besides Allah, nor was he able to defend himself. Those who had longed to take his place the day before began to say: “Allah gives abundantly to whom He will, and sparingly to whom He pleases. If Allah had not shown great kindness to us, we would have been swallowed up as well. Ah! Truly the disbelievers are not successful.” As for the abode of the Hereafter, We shall grant it to those who do not seek to exalt themselves in this world or to cause corruption in it. The successful outcome is for those who fear Allah. (Surat al-Qasas: 76-83)

As can be understood from the verses, Qarun and those who envied him were representative of a typical society of ignorance. They failed to comprehend that Allah is the owner of everything and that Allah bestows possessions upon whoever He wishes. Qarun thought that the wealth he possessed had been given to him because of his superiority. But this was not so.

- Because Allah creates every being, He is the real owner of everything. In this sense, one who owns something may be considered as a “trustee,” temporarily taking care of a possession which actually belongs to Allah.

- Blessings bestowed upon people are given to them not because they are superior or because they possess something important. These blessings are given to man as a favor or as a trial. What is expected of him in return is not to grow “arrogant” but to be “grateful” to Allah. If one fails to understand this, the property he owns brings him neither happiness nor salvation in this world and in the Hereafter.

- Property is not given so that one can “hoard” it and be parsimonious. Allah gives property to man so that he may use it in Allah’s way. The end of those who do otherwise is stated in the Qur’an as follows:

Those who are miserly with the bounty Allah has given them should not suppose that that is better for them. No indeed, it is worse for them! What they were mean with will be hung around their necks on the Day of Rising. Allah is the inheritor of the heavens and the earth and Allah is aware of what you do. (Surah Al ‘Imran: 180)

- While spending the wealth bestowed upon him by Allah, the individual must use it wisely to attain the approval of Allah, without fearing the exhaustion of his resources. In the Qur’an, Allah draws attention to this danger and reminds us that satan threatens man with “poverty” (Surat al-Baqara: 268) It is further stated that Allah repays whatever is spent in His way. The relevant verse about this issue reads:

Say: “My Lord gives abundantly to whom He wills or sparingly to whom He pleases. But anything you expend will be repaid by Him. He is the Best of Providers.” (Surah Saba’: 39)

In the story of Qarun, Allah in fact reveals a general attribute of the society of ignorance. A closer examination of the story reveals that Qarun could actually be representative of a character in the society of ignorance that embodies a number of rich and prestigious people.

In the relevant verses, reference is also made to those who envy Qarun. These people have the very same ignorant rationale as Qarun and fail to understand that the real owner of property is Allah. So, they attach great importance to Qarun and his wealth.
Those who can distance themselves from the indoctrination of society are the true believers:

- Because the criterion of believers was not money but faith and because they knew all property belonged to Allah, they realized that it was unwise to envy Qarun. Furthermore, they understood that he was certainly in a pitiable position.

- Unlike the members of the society of ignorance, they did not say: “Allah gives abundantly to whom He wills, or sparingly to whom He pleases” after Qarun’s death, but comprehended this fact right at the beginning.

A similar situation is related in the story of “the owners of the vineyards.” The distinction between a man who is given plenty of blessings and property, as is in the case of Qarun, and a believer, who believes in Allah and observes his duty to Him, is related in the Qur’an as follows:

Give them this parable. Once there were two men, to one of whom We gave two gardens of grape-vines and surrounded them with date-palms, putting between them some cultivated land. Both gardens yielded their crops and did not suffer any loss, and We made a river flow right through the middle of them. He was a man of wealth and property and he said to his companion, which conversing with him, “I have more wealth than you and my clan is mightier than yours.” He entered his garden and wronged himself by saying, “I do not think that this will ever end. I do not think the Hour of Doom will ever come. But if I should be sent back to my Lord, I will definitely get something better in return.” His companion, with whom he was conversing, said to him, “Do you then disbelieve in Him Who created you from dust, then from a drop of sperm, and then formed you as a man? He is, however, Allah, my Lord, and I will not associate anyone with my Lord. Why, when you entered your garden, did you not say, “It is as Allah wills, there is no strength but in Allah”? Though you see me with less wealth and children than you possess, it may well be that my Lord will give me something better than your garden and send down on it a fireball from the sky so that morning finds it a shifting heap of dust, or morning finds its water drained into the earth so that you cannot get at it.”

The fruits of his labor were completely destroyed and he woke up wringing his hands in grief, ruing everything that he had spent on it. It was total ruin with all its trellises fallen in.

He said, “Oh, if only I had not associated anyone with my Lord!” There was no group to come to his aid, besides Allah, and he was unable to defend himself. In that situation the only protection is from Allah, the Truth. He gives the best reward and the best outcome.

(Surat al-Kahf: 32-44)

Those Who Highly Esteem Material Values

In many stories in the Qur’an, Allah mentions a group of people to whom Muslims convey the morality of religion and wage an ideological struggle against their negative attitudes. In the Qur’an, Allah gives an account of the attributes of this group of people that appear in almost all stories of prophets.
In the Qur'an, this segment of society is defined with phrases such as “arrogant chiefs of the people,” “those who led lives of ease,” “those persisting in immense wrongdoing” and “those who were unjustly proud in the land.” Their common quality is their employment of power and possessions to revolt against Allah and to make mischief on earth. Allah reveals these in the verses:

We never sent a warner into any city without the affluent people in it saying, “We reject what you have been sent with.” They also said, “We have more wealth and children. We are not going to be punished.” (Surah Saba’: 34-35)

- In accord with the information provided in these verses, the attributes of these people can be listed as follows: The “possessions and children” given to these people added to their arrogance and denial of Allah

  (Truly, Allah is above what they ascribe to Him):

  The ‘Ad were arrogant and unjust in the land, without any right, saying, “Who has greater strength than us?” Did they not see that Allah, Who created them, had greater strength than them? But they renounced Our Signs. (Surah Fussilat: 15)

However, it will be useful to clarify the following point here: the possession of broad material means is not a negative feature. People do need to be aware, however, that it is Almighty Allah Who bestows these means on them and people must not fail to give thanks to Him for everything they possess. What is wrong is to become proud because of the means given them in the life of this world and for this pride to lead to denial. The people whose vices are described as warnings in the Qur’an made that mistake.

The main criticism heard by believers as they communicate the moral values of the Qur’an generally comes from those “affluent people” spoiled by comfort and well-being. Since they refuse to submit to Allah and to use the means at their disposal in the manner He wishes, they exhibit hatred toward believers. For example, it was this anger among the pagans of Mecca that led some to seek to imprison, expel and even kill our beloved Prophet (saas):

When those who disbelieve were plotting against you to imprison you or kill you or expel you: they were plotting and Allah was plotting, but Allah is the Best of Plotters. (Surat al-Anfal: 30)

Similar examples to such communities described in detail in the Qur’an can also be found in present-day societies. These people, who live degenerate lives, regarding all forms of moral perversion as legitimate, and who represent the leading class in society because of the means at their disposal, represent one of the main causes of social moral collapse. This, the result of societies turning to all kinds of sexual perversion and whose idea of entertainment consists of the consumption of enormous quantities of drugs and alcohol, can clearly be seen in various South American, South Asian and Western nations.

However, it must not be forgotten that no system constructed on immorality, fraud, hypocrisy and injustice can ever be permanent. All false and degenerate systems are condemned to disappear. This truth is revealed in these terms in the Qur’an:
... shown by their arrogance in the land and evil plotting. But evil plotting envelops only those who do it. Do they expect anything but the pattern of previous peoples? You will not find any changing in the pattern of Allah. You will not find any alteration in the pattern of Allah. (Surat al-Fatir: 43)

As can be seen, the defeat of all groups that become proud and spoiled because of the material means at their disposal, and that use these to lead immoral lives, is a law of Allah. Yet all such people can still repent during their time in this world and abandon their evil ways. People adhering to such a system must never forget that Allah is always forgiving, and that He forgives those who reject that path and turn to true faith, who begin to work for the benefit of the nation and the country, and who behave with goodness and justice.

Whoever follows the true path will first and foremost abide by it for his or her own good. If people nonetheless return to the path of evil and perversion, there is no doubt that Allah’s punishment is very severe. As Allah reveals in another verse:

Whoever is guided is only guided to his own good. Whoever is misguided is only misguided to his detriment. No burden-bearer can bear another’s burden. We never punish until We have sent a messenger. (Surat al-Isra’: 15)
Distorted Understanding of Morality in the Society of Ignorance

The morality of believers described in the Qur’an is based on fear of Allah and His approval. Since the members of the society of “ignorance” do not establish their value judgments on piety, their moral values are also distorted.

Since the society of “ignorance” is unaware of the infinite power of Allah, its members base their moral understanding on the criterion best expressed in the words: “What will people think?” Such an understanding permits the commission of morally unacceptable acts in an environment where no one hears or witnesses them. Alternatively, this immoral understanding is legitimized under a new title and form.

For instance, many people in the society of “ignorance” consider adultery immoral. Some individuals who commit adultery hardly dare to admit it. However, they generally do not avoid committing it, provided that not a soul witnesses it.

It is possible to observe various forms of this conduct in the lives of most ignorant people.

The Desire to Live Forever

Say: “Death, from which you are fleeing, will certainly catch up with you. Then you will be returned to the Knower of the Unseen and the Visible and He will inform you about what you did.” (Surat al-Jumu’a: 8)
While lacking a sincere belief in the existence of Allah and the Hereafter, the members of the society of “ignorance” behave “as if they will never die.” In this society, death continues to be one of those words that is never spoken. While making plans, death is ignored outright. They pile up fortunes as if the life of this world were perpetual. Since these plans pertain entirely to this world, those who recall death are called “killjoys.”

This is one of the most evident indications of the distorted rationale upon which ignorant unbelievers base their lives. Since “every soul shall taste death” (Surah Al ‘Imran: 185), a life based on feigning ignorance of death is surely established on a rotten foundation. However, man must employ his intellect and conscience:

- Since he is granted the desire to live forever, he must think why his life should be restricted to 60-70 years.
- He should recognize as an unwise rationale, the assumption that avoidance of the thought of death is a way to keep death at distance. This is behaving just like an ostrich with its head in the sand.
- He should grasp the fact that Allah, Who has shaped him into a most perfect body out of a sperm, has the might to recreate him and to give him a new life.
- Finally, he must keep in mind that Allah, Who promised and asserted in hundreds of verses that He would recreate him after death, will surely keep His promise.

All of the above will lead him to comprehend that death is not a form of disappearance, but a transition to the Hereafter.

- In this case, he may also understand that fear of death is senseless. In fact, fear of death will avail him nothing; death is inescapable. Everybody will die at a predestined time. Those who fear death are warned in the Qur’an as follows:

... They are concealing things inside themselves which they do not disclose to you, saying, “If we had only had a say in the affair, none of us would have been killed here in this place.” Say, “Even if you had been inside your homes, those people for whom killing was decreed would have gone out to their place of death.”... (Surah Al ‘Imran: 154)

Death, which is a door to the Hereafter, brings bliss and salvation only to those who have spent their lives in compliance with Allah’s good pleasure. For those who turned away from Allah, on the other hand, death means utter destruction and the beginning of a horrible disaster. In the Qur’an it is related that once death comes, the regret felt by those who have forgotten Allah—as if they would never die—will be of no avail:

There is no forgiveness for people who persist in doing evil until death comes to them and who then say, “Now I repent,” nor for people who die disbelievers. We have prepared for them a painful punishment. (Surat an-Nisa’: 18)

When death comes to a wrongdoer, he says, “My Lord, send me back again, so that perhaps I may act rightly regarding the things I failed to do!” No indeed! It is just words he utters. Before them there shall stand a barrier until the Day they are raised up. (Surat al-Mu’minun: 99-100)
Everybody who has not devoted his life to Allah will live to suffer this regret unless Allah wills otherwise.

Consider that life is too short, that there is a real eternal life after the life of this world, and that one is entitled to attain eternal life, provided that he earns the approval of Allah in this world;

- We must concern ourselves with the real life, due to begin after death, more than with the life of this world, which is short and worthless next to the eternal abundance promised. That is why, believers who conceive of this fact are of those whose “sincerity has been purified through earnest remembrance of the Abode.” (Surah Sad: 46)

- It is utterly foolish to be deceived by the insignificance and deceptive allure of the world and become deeply attached to it. Neither possessions, nor beauty, neither power, family, nor fame can accompany a person to his grave. What is left in the grave is only a body wrapped in a shroud, which undergoes a rapid process of decay after burial.

- What will be taken to the Hereafter are the good deeds and acts of worship done to earn the approval of Allah. There, the temporary blessings of this world (health, beauty, wealth and so on) will, in their most perfect forms, be given back to man for all eternity.

- One who fails to comprehend this fact and, remaining stingy avoids spending his wealth in Allah’s way, eventually ruins his eternal life in the Hereafter and does harm to his own soul:

Here you are then: people who are called upon to spend in the Way of Allah and then some of you are ungenerous! But whoever is ungenerous to the cause is ungenerous to himself. Allah is Rich and you are poor. If you turn away, He will replace you with a people other than yourselves and they will not be like you. (Surah Muhammad: 38)

Those who fail to grasp this and become deeply attached to this world strive to attain a so-called “immortality,” for which reason they have the desire to “leave something in this world by which people may remember them.” This desire appears in various forms:

- Some try to leave “works of art” behind, so that “their name may live on.” In the Qur’an, Allah says of this attitude:

  Will you build a tower on every hilltop, just to amuse yourselves, and construct great fortresses, hoping to live for ever? (Surat ash-Shu’ara’: 128-129)

- This rationale best expresses itself in the desire to “raise children.” Those who place no hope in the Hereafter wish to have children who will carry the family name into the future. This is the main reason why families prefer sons.

It is stated in the Qur’an that the desire to “have children” is merely part of the temporal pomp of this world:

Know that the life of the world is merely a game and a diversion, ostentation and a cause of boasting among yourselves and trying to outdo one another in wealth and children: like the plant-growth after rain which delights the cultivators, but then it withers and you see it turning yellow, and then it becomes broken
...stubble. In the Hereafter there is terrible punishment but also the forgiveness of Allah and His approval. The life of this world is nothing but the enjoyment of delusion. (Surat al-Hadid: 20)

Of course, it is most agreeable for people to desire to raise children with good morals. However, in the twisted system of the society of ignorance, the aim behind this desire is not to please Allah but to satisfy their arrogance and to leave a permanent mark behind them in this world.

However, when we refer to the Qur’an, we witness the attitude of true believers; they ask for children from Allah only if it is for the good pleasure of Allah, and they raise their children in compliance with Allah’s good pleasure. Most of the prophets lived their lives without children since they did not have such an opportunity during their time and age and only asked for children from Allah when they grew too old and needed someone who would continue to communicate the message of Allah and advocate His religion.

The Conception of Religion in the Society of Ignorance

Such people as described above, who fail to give Allah due appreciation and thus are “ignorant,” have interpreted religion in accordance with their own distorted rationale and beliefs. The resulting understanding of religion shows apparent deviations from the original religion as set forth in the Qur’an. Allah defines the religion revealed to the Prophet Muhammad (saas) as one that “relieves people of their heavy loads and the chains which were around them.” (Surat al-A’raf: 157) and as the religion that “contains no difficulties in it”:

... He has selected you and not placed any constraint upon you in the observance of your religion—the religion of your forefather Abraham In this, as in former scriptures he named you Muslims... (Surat al-Hajj: 78)

In the Qur’an, Allah has summoned people to reflect and, recognizing the erroneous beliefs and methods they hold, to turn to the lifestyle deemed to be appropriate by Allah.

The society of ignorance, however, feigning not to see the explicit and comprehensible message of the Qur’an, has, in the name of Islam, fabricated a religion bogged down in bigotry. Some of the characteristics of this distorted religion are as follows:

- The religion introduced in the Qur’an summons people to serve Allah alone and thus commands people not to take other any entities as gods except for Him. Accordingly, since he is not obliged to seek other people’s pleasure, man is only responsible for seeking Allah’s approval. The people of the society of ignorance, however, have developed an understanding of religion not as a way to seek Allah’s pleasure but as a social institution. Owing to this twisted perception, the religion that results has lapsed into a form which is primarily concerned with “what people would say,”—a way of thinking far removed from the true morality of religion.

- The conception of religion in the society of ignorance, which has no idea or comprehension regarding the moral values of the Qur’an, is based on various superstitious beliefs. Various local customs and beliefs and cultural factors have been incorporated into the religion, and “being pious” has deteriorated into “adherence to one’s forefathers’ superstitious beliefs.” The religion revealed by Allah in the Qur’an and embodied in the exemplary life of the Prophet Muhammad (saas), however, bears no similarity whatsoever to these. In the Qur’an, Allah commands man to take His limits and the Sunnah of the Prophet (saas) as a measure and nothing else. Throughout history, the prophets had to struggle with those who attempted to deny the truth by quoting the superstitious beliefs inherited from their forefathers. The morality they displayed is indicated in the verse below:

When they are told, “Follow what Allah has sent down to you,” they say, “We are following what we found our fathers doing.” What, even though their fathers did not understand a thing and were not guided! (Surat al-Baqara: 170)

The same theme is repeated in Surat al-Ma’ida: 104; Surat al-An’am: 91; Surat al-A’raf: 28 and in many other verses as well.

- Some of the members of the society of ignorance, who foolishly evaluate religion in compliance with that mistaken understanding, in consequence fall into the error that religion is separate from reason. However, as Allah informs us in the Qur’an, being a Muslim entails being wise. Believers are always summoned to think, to enquire and thus see the verses of Allah. Faith and wisdom are interrelated; as a consequence of exercising wisdom one attains faith, and faith grows ever more profound as one continues to exercise wisdom.
- That distorted rationale, stemming from ignorance, sees no harm in introducing new principles to religion and making unlawful what is lawful, based on a mistaken mentality of their own.

In the Qur’an, Allah reveals this mistaken rationale that disturbs many people:

Say: “Who has forbidden the fine clothing Allah has produced for His servants and the good kinds of provision?” Say: “On the Day of Rising such things will be exclusively for those who had faith during their life in the world.” In this way We make the Signs clear for people who know.

Say: “My Lord has forbidden indecency, both open and hidden, and wrong action, and unrighteous tyranny, and associating anything with Allah for which He has sent down no authority, and saying things about Allah you do not know.” (Surat al-A’raf: 32-33)

What is the matter with you that you do not eat that which has been consecrated in the name of Allah, when He has made clear to you what He has made unlawful for you, except when you are forced to eat it? Many people lead others astray through their whims and desires unchecked by any knowledge. Your Lord knows best those who overstep the limits. (Surat al-An’am: 119)

You who believe! Do not make unlawful the good things Allah has made lawful for you, and do not overstep the limits. Allah does not love people who overstep the limits. (Surat al-Ma’ida: 87)
- As a result of this superstitious understanding caused by the society of ignorance, Islam is being presented in a different form rather than in its real nature. The fact is that Islam is the true faith, in which reason, beauty, love, understanding, warmth, compassion, cleanliness, quality and nobility predominate. Prophets have always been the most civilized people of their time. They were cultured and enlightened people with refined aesthetic values. With his manners, the quality of his esthetic understanding, his beauty, cleanliness and superior moral values, our Prophet (saas) is the finest role model for all believers. With his palace, which is known to have been an architectural masterpiece abounding in many exquisite places, the Prophet Solomon (as) is one of the most outstanding examples cited in the Qur’an.

Being a Muslim is to be a servant to Allah and to be grateful for the blessings granted by Him. It means striving to know Allah, drawing nearer to Him and becoming a human being with a noble character.

A true Muslim is one who seeks the approval of his Creator, Allah, the Almighty, and who has distanced himself from any material or spiritual expectation other than earning His approval.

This is one of the definitions of a Muslim.

Darwinism, in other words the theory of evolution, was put forward with the aim of denying the fact of Creation, but is in truth nothing but failed, unscientific nonsense. This theory, which claims that life emerged by chance from inanimate matter, was invalidated by the scientific evidence of miraculous order in the universe and in living things, as well as by the discovery of more than 300 million fossils revealing that evolution never happened. In this way, science confirmed the fact that Allah created the universe and the living things in it.

The propaganda carried out today in order to keep the theory of evolution alive is based solely on the distortion of the scientific facts, biased interpretation, and lies and falsehoods disguised as science.

Yet this propaganda cannot conceal the truth. The fact that the theory of evolution is the greatest deception in the history of science has been expressed more and more in the scientific world over the last twenty to thirty years. Research carried out after the 1980s in particular has revealed that the claims of Darwinism are totally unfounded, something that has been stated by a large number of scientists. In the United States in particular, many scientists from such different fields as biology, biochemistry and paleontology recognize the invalidity of Darwinism and employ the fact of Creation to account for the origin of life.

We have examined the collapse of the theory of evolution and the proofs of Creation in great scientific detail in many of our works, and are still continuing to do so. Given the enormous importance of this subject, it will be of great benefit to summarize it here.

The Scientific Collapse of Darwinism

As a pagan doctrine going back as far as ancient Greece, the theory of evolution was advanced extensively in the nineteenth century. The most important development that made it the top topic of the world of science was Charles Darwin's The Origin of Species, published in 1859. In this book, he opposed, in his own eyes, the fact that Allah created different living species on Earth separately, for he erroneously claimed that all living beings had a common ancestor and had diversified over time through small changes. Darwin's theory was not based on any concrete scientific finding; as he also accepted, it was just an "assumption." Moreover, as Darwin confessed in the long chapter of his book titled "Difficulties on Theory," the theory failed in the face of many critical questions.

Darwin invested all of his hopes in new scientific discoveries, which he expected to solve these difficulties. However, contrary to his expectations, scientific findings expanded the dimensions of these difficulties. The defeat of Darwinism in the face of science can be reviewed under three basic topics:

1) The theory cannot explain how life originated on Earth.

2) No scientific finding shows that the "evolutionary mechanisms" proposed by the theory have any evolutionary power at all.

3) The fossil record proves the exact opposite of what the theory suggests.

In this section, we will examine these three basic points in general outlines:

The First Insurmountable Step: The Origin of Life

The theory of evolution posits that all living species evolved from a single living cell that emerged on Earth 3.8 billion years ago, supposed to have happened as a result of coincidences. How a single cell could generate millions of complex living species and, if such an evolution really occurred, why traces of it cannot be observed in the fossil record are some of the questions that the theory cannot answer. However, first and foremost, we need to ask: How did this "first cell" originate?

Since the theory of evolution ignorantly denies Creation, it maintains that the "first cell" originated as a product of blind coincidences within the laws of nature, without any plan or arrangement. According to the theory, inanimate matter must have produced a living cell as a result of coincidences. Such a claim, however, is inconsistent with the most unassailable rules of biology.
Life Comes From Life

In his book, Darwin never referred to the origin of life. The primitive understanding of science in his time rested on the assumption that living beings had a very simple structure. Since medieval times, spontaneous generation, which asserts that non-living materials came together to form living organisms, had been widely accepted. It was commonly believed that insects came into being from food leftovers, and mice from wheat. Interesting experiments were conducted to prove this theory. Some wheat was placed on a dirty piece of cloth, and it was believed that mice would originate from it after a while.

Similarly, maggots developing in rotting meat was assumed to be evidence of spontaneous generation. However, it was later understood that worms did not appear on meat spontaneously, but were carried there by flies in the form of larvae, invisible to the naked eye.

Even when Darwin wrote The Origin of Species, the belief that bacteria could come into existence from non-living matter was widely accepted in the world of science.

However, five years after the publication of Darwin's book, Louis Pasteur announced his results after long studies and experiments, that disproved spontaneous generation, a cornerstone of Darwin's theory. In his triumphal lecture at the Sorbonne in 1864, Pasteur said: "Never will the doctrine of spontaneous generation recover from the mortal blow struck by this simple experiment."¹

For a long time, advocates of the theory of evolution resisted these findings. However, as the development of science unraveled the complex structure of the cell of a living being, the idea that life could come into being coincidentally faced an even greater impasse.
Inconclusive Efforts of the Twentieth Century

The first evolutionist who took up the subject of the origin of life in the twentieth century was the renowned Russian biologist Alexander Oparin. With various theses he advanced in the 1930s, he tried to prove that a living cell could originate by coincidence. These studies, however, were doomed to failure, and Oparin had to make the following confession:

Unfortunately, however, the problem of the origin of the cell is perhaps the most obscure point in the whole study of the evolution of organisms.²

Evolutionist followers of Oparin tried to carry out experiments to solve this problem. The best known experiment was carried out by the American chemist Stanley Miller in 1953. Combining the gases he alleged to have existed in the primordial Earth's atmosphere in an experiment set-up, and adding energy to the mixture, Miller synthesized several organic molecules (amino acids) present in the structure of proteins.

 Barely a few years had passed before it was revealed that this experiment, which was then presented as an important step in the name of evolution, was invalid, for the atmosphere used in the experiment was very different from the real Earth conditions.³

 After a long silence, Miller confessed that the atmosphere medium he used was unrealistic.⁴

 All the evolutionists' efforts throughout the twentieth century to explain the origin of life ended in failure. The geochemist Jeffrey Bada, from the San Diego Scripps

Institute accepts this fact in an article published in Earth magazine in 1998:

Today as we leave the twentieth century, we still face the biggest unsolved problem that we had when we entered the twentieth century: How did life originate on Earth?\(^5\)

The Complex Structure of Life

The primary reason why evolutionists ended up in such a great impasse regarding the origin of life is that even those living organisms Darwinists deemed to be the simplest have outstandingly complex features. The cell of a living thing is more complex than all of our man-made technological products. Today, even in the most developed laboratories of the world, no single protein of the cell, let alone a living cell itself, can be produced by bringing organic chemicals together.

The conditions required for the formation of a cell are too great in quantity to be explained away by coincidences.

However, there is no need to explain the situation with these details. Evolutionists are at a dead-end even before reaching the stage of the cell. That is because the probability of just a single protein, an essential building block of the cell, coming into being by chance is mathematically "0."

The main reason for this is the need for other proteins to be present if one protein is to form, and this completely eradicates the possibility of chance formation. This fact by itself is sufficient to eliminate the evolutionist claim of chance right from the outset. To summarize,

1. Protein cannot be synthesized without enzymes, and enzymes are all proteins.
2. Around 100 proteins need to be present in order for a single protein to be synthesized. There therefore need to be proteins for proteins to exist.

3. DNA manufactures the protein-synthesizing enzymes. Protein cannot be synthesized without DNA. DNA is therefore also needed in order for proteins to form.

4. All the organelles in the cell have important tasks in protein synthesis. In other words, in order for proteins to form a perfect and fully functioning cell needs to exist together with all its organelles.

The DNA molecule, which is located in the nucleus of a cell and which stores genetic information, is a magnificent databank. If the information coded in DNA were written down, it would make a giant library consisting of an estimated 900 volumes of encyclopedias consisting of 500 pages each.

A very interesting dilemma emerges at this point: DNA can replicate itself only with the help of some specialized proteins (enzymes). However, the synthesis of these enzymes can be realized only by the information coded in DNA. As they both depend on each other, they have to exist at the same time for replication. This brings the scenario that life originated by itself to a deadlock. Prof. Leslie Orgel, an evolutionist of repute from the University of San Diego, California, confesses this fact in the September 1994 issue of the Scientific American magazine:

It is extremely improbable that proteins and nucleic acids, both of which are structurally complex, arose spontaneously in the same place at the same time. Yet it also seems impossible to have one without the other. And so, at first glance, one might have to conclude that life could never, in fact, have originated by chemical means.

No doubt, if it is impossible for life to have originated spontaneously as a result of blind coincidences, then it has to be accepted that life was created. This fact explicitly invalidates the theory of evolution, whose main purpose is to deny Creation.

Imaginary Mechanism of Evolution

The second important point that negates Darwin's theory is that both concepts put forward by the theory as "evolutionary mechanisms" were understood to have, in reality, no evolutionary power.

Darwin based his evolution allegation entirely on the mechanism of "natural selection." The importance he placed on this mechanism was evident in the name of his book: The Origin of Species, By Means of Natural Selection...

Natural selection holds that those living things that are stronger and more suited to the natural conditions of their habitats will survive in the struggle for life. For example, in a deer herd under the threat of attack by wild animals, those that can run faster will survive. Therefore, the deer herd will be comprised of faster and stronger individuals. However, unquestionably, this mechanism will not cause deer to evolve and transform themselves into another living species, for instance, horses.

Therefore, the mechanism of natural selection has no evolutionary power. Darwin was also aware of this fact and had to state this in his book The Origin of Species:

Natural selection can do nothing until favourable individual differences or variations occur.
Lamarck’s Impact

So, how could these "favorable variations" occur? Darwin tried to answer this question from the standpoint of the primitive understanding of science at that time. According to the French biologist Chevalier de Lamarck (1744-1829), who lived before Darwin, living creatures passed on the traits they acquired during their lifetime to the next generation. He asserted that these traits, which accumulated from one generation to another, caused new species to be formed. For instance, he claimed that giraffes evolved from antelopes; as they struggled to eat the leaves of high trees, their necks were extended from generation to generation.

Darwin also gave similar examples. In his book The Origin of Species, for instance, he said that some bears going into water to find food transformed themselves into whales over time.8

However, the laws of inheritance discovered by Gregor Mendel (1822-84) and verified by the science of genetics, which flourished in the twentieth century, utterly demolished the legend that acquired traits were passed on to subsequent generations. Thus, natural selection fell out of favor as an evolutionary mechanism.

Neo-Darwinism and Mutations

In order to find a solution, Darwinists advanced the "Modern Synthetic Theory," or as it is more commonly known, Neo-Darwinism, at the end of the 1930s. Neo-Darwinism added mutations, which are distortions formed in the genes of living beings due to such external factors as radiation or replication errors, as the "cause of favorable variations" in addition to natural mutation.
Today, the model that Darwinists espouse, despite their own awareness of its scientific invalidity, is neo-Darwinism. The theory maintains that millions of living beings formed as a result of a process whereby numerous complex organs of these organisms (e.g., ears, eyes, lungs, and wings) underwent "mutations," that is, genetic disorders. Yet, there is an outright scientific fact that totally undermines this theory: Mutations do not cause living beings to develop; on the contrary, they are always harmful.

The reason for this is very simple: DNA has a very complex structure, and random effects can only harm it. The American geneticist B. G. Ranganathan explains this as follows:

First, genuine mutations are very rare in nature. Secondly, most mutations are harmful since they are random, rather than orderly changes in the structure of genes; any random change in a highly ordered system will be for the worse, not for the better. For example, if an earthquake were to shake a highly ordered structure such as a building, there would be a random change in the framework of the building which, in all probability, would not be an improvement.

Not surprisingly, no mutation example, which is useful, that is, which is observed to develop the genetic code, has been observed so far. All mutations have proved to be harmful. It was understood that mutation, which is presented as an "evolutionary mechanism," is actually a genetic occurrence that harms living things, and leaves them disabled. (The most common effect of mutation on human beings is cancer.) Of course, a destructive mechanism cannot be an "evolutionary mechanism." Natural selection, on the other hand, "can do nothing by itself," as Darwin also accepted. This fact shows us that there is no "evolutionary mechanism" in nature. Since no evolutionary mechanism exists, no such imaginary process called "evolution" could have taken place.

The Fossil Record: No Sign of Intermediate Forms

The clearest evidence that the scenario suggested by the theory of evolution did not take place is the fossil record.

According to the unscientific supposition of this theory, every living species has sprung from a predecessor. A previously existing species turned into something else over time and all species have come into being in this way. In other words, this transformation proceeds gradually over millions of years.

Had this been the case, numerous intermediary species should have existed and lived within this long transformation period.

For instance, some half-fish/half-reptiles should have lived in the past which had acquired some reptilian traits in addition to the fish traits they already had. Or there should have existed some reptile-birds, which acquired some bird traits in addition to the reptilian traits they already had. Since these would be in a transitional phase, they should be disabled, defective, crippled living beings. Evolutionists refer to these imaginary creatures, which they believe to have lived in the past, as "transitional forms."

If such animals ever really existed, there should be millions and even billions of them in number and variety. More importantly, the remains of these strange creatures should be present in the fossil record. In The Origin of Species, Darwin explained:

If my theory be true, numberless intermediate varieties, linking most closely all of the species of the same group together must assuredly have existed... Consequently, evidence of their former existence could be found only amongst fossil remains.\(^\text{10}\)

However, Darwin was well aware that no fossils of these intermediate forms had yet been found. He regarded this as a major difficulty for his theory. In one chapter of his book titled "Difficulties on Theory," he wrote:

Why, if species have descended from other species by insensibly fine gradations, do we not everywhere see innumerable transitional forms? Why is not all nature in confusion instead of the species being, as we see them, well defined?...

But, as by this theory innumerable transitional forms must have existed, why do we not find them embedded in countless numbers in the crust of the earth?... Why then is not every geological formation and every stratum full of such intermediate links?\(^\text{11}\)

Darwin’s Hopes Shattered

However, although evolutionists have been making strenuous efforts to find fossils since the middle of the nineteenth century all over the world, no transitional forms have yet been uncovered. All of the fossils, contrary to the evolutionists' expectations, show that life appeared on Earth all of a sudden and fully-formed.

One famous British paleontologist, Derek V. Ager, admits this fact, even though he is an evolutionist:

The point emerges that if we examine the fossil record in detail, whether at the level of orders or of species, we find—over and over again—not gradual evolution, but the sudden explosion of one group at the expense of another.\(^\text{12}\)
This means that in the fossil record, all living species suddenly emerge as fully formed, without any intermediate forms in between. This is just the opposite of Darwin's assumptions. Also, this is very strong evidence that all living things are created. The only explanation of a living species emerging suddenly and complete in every detail without any evolutionary ancestor is that it was created. This fact is admitted also by the widely known evolutionist biologist Douglas Futuyma:

Creation and evolution, between them, exhaust the possible explanations for the origin of living things. Organisms either appeared on the earth fully developed or they did not. If they did not, they must have developed from pre-existing species by some process of modification. If they did appear in a fully developed state, they must indeed have been created by some omnipotent intelligence.\textsuperscript{13}

Fossils show that living beings emerged fully developed and in a perfect state on the Earth. That means that "the origin of species," contrary to Darwin's supposition, is not evolution, but Creation.

The Tale of Human Evolution

The subject most often brought up by advocates of the theory of evolution is the subject of the origin of man. The Darwinist claim holds that man evolved from so-called ape-like creatures. During this alleged evolutionary process, which is supposed to have started 4-5 million years ago, some "transitional forms" between man and his imaginary ancestors are supposed to have existed. According to this completely imaginary scenario, four basic "categories" are listed:

1. Australopithecus
2. Homo habilis
3. Homo erectus
4. Homo sapiens

Evolutionists call man's so-called first ape-like ancestors Australopithecus, which means "South African ape." These living beings are actually nothing but an old ape species that has become extinct. Extensive research done on various Australopithecus specimens by two world famous anatomists from England and the USA, namely, Lord Solly Zuckerman and Prof. Charles Oxnard, shows that these apes belonged to an ordinary ape species that became extinct and bore no resemblance to humans.14

Evolutionists classify the next stage of human evolution as "homo," that is "man." According to their claim, the living beings in the Homo series are more developed than Australopithecus. Evolutionists devise a fanciful evolution scheme by arranging different fossils of these creatures in a particular order. This scheme is imaginary because it has never been proved that there is an evolutionary relation between these different classes. Ernst Mayr, one of the twentieth century's most important evolutionists, contends in his book One Long Argument that "particularly historical [puzzles] such as the origin of life or of Homo sapiens, are extremely difficult and may even resist a final, satisfying explanation."15

By outlining the link chain as Australopithecus > Homo habilis > Homo erectus > Homo sapiens, evolutionists imply that each of these species is one another's ancestor. However, recent findings of paleoanthropologists have revealed that Australopithecus, Homo habilis, and Homo erectus lived at different parts of the world at the same time.16
Moreover, a certain segment of humans classified as Homo erectus have lived up until very modern times. Homo sapiens neandarthalensis and Homo sapiens sapiens (man) co-existed in the same region.\(^\text{17}\)

This situation apparently indicates the invalidity of the claim that they are ancestors of one another. Stephen Jay Gould explained this deadlock of the theory of evolution although he was himself one of the leading advocates of evolution in the twentieth century:

> What has become of our ladder if there are three coexisting lineages of hominids (A. africanus, the robust australopithecines, and H. habilis), none clearly derived from another? Moreover, none of the three display any evolutionary trends during their tenure on earth.\(^\text{18}\)

Put briefly, the scenario of human evolution, which is "upheld" with the help of various drawings of some "half ape, half human" creatures appearing in the media and course books, that is, frankly, by means of propaganda, is nothing but a tale with no scientific foundation.

Lord Solly Zuckerman, one of the most famous and respected scientists in the U.K., who carried out research on this subject for years and studied Australopithecus fossils for 15 years, finally concluded, despite being an evolutionist himself, that there is, in fact, no such family tree branching out from ape-like creatures to man.

Zuckerman also made an interesting "spectrum of science" ranging from those he considered scientific to those he considered unscientific. According to Zuckerman's spectrum, the most "scientific" – that is, depending on concrete data – fields of science are chemistry and physics. After them come the biological sciences and then the social sciences.
the far end of the spectrum, which is the part considered to be most "unscientific," are "extra-sensory perception" – concepts such as telepathy and sixth sense – and finally "human evolution." Zuckerman explains his reasoning:

We then move right off the register of objective truth into those fields of presumed biological science, like extrasensory perception or the interpretation of man’s fossil history, where to the faithful [evolutionist] anything is possible – and where the ardent believer [in evolution] is sometimes able to believe several contradictory things at the same time.\(^1\)

The tale of human evolution boils down to nothing but the prejudiced interpretations of some fossils unearthed by certain people, who blindly adhere to their theory.

Darwinian Formula!

Besides all the technical evidence we have dealt with so far, let us now for once, examine what kind of a superstition the evolutionists have with an example so simple as to be understood even by children:

The theory of evolution asserts that life is formed by chance. According to this irrational claim, lifeless and unconscious atoms came together to form the cell and then they somehow formed other living things, including man. Let us think about that. When we bring together the elements that are the building-blocks of life such as carbon, phosphorus, nitrogen and potassium, only a heap is formed. No matter what treatments it undergoes, this atomic heap cannot form even a single living being. If you like, let us formulate an "experiment" on this subject and let us examine on the behalf of evolutionists what they really claim without pronouncing loudly under the name "Darwinian formula":

Let evolutionists put plenty of materials present in the composition of living things such as phosphorus, nitrogen, carbon, oxygen, iron, and magnesium into big barrels. Moreover, let them add in these barrels any material that does not exist under normal conditions, but they think as necessary. Let them add in this mixture as many amino acids and as many proteins as they like. Let them expose these mixtures to as much heat and moisture as they like. Let them stir these with whatever technologically developed device they like. Let them put the foremost scientists beside these barrels. Let these experts wait in turn beside these barrels for billions, and even trillions of years. Let them be free to use all kinds of conditions they believe to be necessary for a human’s formation. No matter what they do, they cannot produce from these barrels a human, say a professor that examines his cell structure under the electron microscope. They cannot produce giraffes, lions, bees, canaries, horses, dolphins, roses, orchids, lilies, carnations, bananas, oranges, apples, dates, tomatoes, melons, watermelons, figs, olives, grapes, peaches, peafowls, pheasants, multicoloured butterflies, or millions of other living beings such as these. Indeed, they could not obtain even a single cell of any one of them.

Briefly, unconscious atoms cannot form the cell by coming together. They cannot take a new decision and divide this cell into two, then take other decisions and create the professors who first invent the electron microscope and then examine their own cell structure under that microscope. Matter is an unconscious, lifeless heap, and it comes to life with Allah's superior Creation.

The theory of evolution, which claims the opposite, is a total fallacy completely contrary to reason. Thinking even a little bit on the claims of evolutionists discloses this reality, just as in the above example.

Technology in the Eye and the Ear

Another subject that remains unanswered by evolutionary theory is the excellent quality of perception in the eye and the ear.

Before passing on to the subject of the eye, let us briefly answer the question of how we see. Light rays coming from an object fall oppositely on the eye's retina. Here, these light rays are transmitted into electric signals by cells and reach a tiny spot at the back of the brain, the "center of vision." These electric signals are perceived in this center as an image after a series of processes. With this technical background, let us do some thinking.

The brain is insulated from light. That means that its inside is completely dark, and that no light reaches the place where it is located. Thus, the "center of vision" is never touched by light and may even be the darkest place you have ever known. However, you observe a luminous, bright world in this pitch darkness.

The image formed in the eye is so sharp and distinct that even the technology of the twentieth century has not been able to attain it. For instance, look at the book you are reading, your hands with which you are holding it, and then lift your head and look around you. Have you ever seen such a sharp and distinct image as this one at any other place? Even the most developed television screen produced by the greatest television producer in the world cannot provide such a sharp image for you. This is a three-dimensional, colored, and extremely sharp image. For more than 100 years, thousands of engineers have been trying to achieve this sharpness. Factories, huge premises were established, much research has been done, plans and designs have been made for this purpose. Again, look at a TV screen and the book you hold in your hands. You will see that there is a big difference in sharpness and distinction. Moreover, the TV screen shows you a two-dimensional image, whereas with your eyes, you watch a three-dimensional perspective with depth.

For many years, tens of thousands of engineers have tried to make a three-dimensional TV and achieve the vision quality of the eye. Yes, they have made a three-dimensional television system, but it is not possible to watch it without putting on special 3-D glasses; moreover, it is only an artificial three-dimension. The background is more blurred, the foreground appears like a paper setting. Never has it been possible to produce a sharp and distinct vision like that of the eye. In both the camera and the television, there is a loss of image quality.

Evolutionists claim that the mechanism producing this sharp and distinct image has been formed by chance. Now, if somebody told you that the television in your room was formed as a result of chance, that all of its atoms just happened to come together and make up this device that produces an image, what would you think? How can atoms do what thousands of people cannot?

If a device producing a more primitive image than the eye could not have been formed by chance, then it is very evident that the eye and the image seen by the eye could not have been formed by chance. The same situation applies to the ear. The outer ear picks up the available sounds by the auricle and directs them to the middle ear, the middle ear transmits the sound vibrations by intensifying them, and the
The inner ear sends these vibrations to the brain by translating them into electric signals. Just as with the eye, the act of hearing finalizes in the center of hearing in the brain.

The situation in the eye is also true for the ear. That is, the brain is insulated from sound just as it is from light. It does not let any sound in. Therefore, no matter how noisy is the outside, the inside of the brain is completely silent. Nevertheless, the sharpest sounds are perceived in the brain. In your completely silent brain, you listen to symphonies, and hear all of the noises in a crowded place. However, were the sound level in your brain measured by a precise device at that moment, complete silence would be found to be prevailing there.

As is the case with imagery, decades of effort have been spent in trying to generate and reproduce sound that is faithful to the original. The results of these efforts are sound recorders, high-fidelity systems, and systems for sensing sound. Despite all of this technology and the thousands of engineers and experts who have been working on this endeavor, no sound has yet been obtained that has the same sharpness and clarity as the sound perceived by the ear. Think of the highest-quality hi-fi systems produced by the largest company in the music industry. Even in these devices, when sound is recorded some of it is lost; or when you turn on a hi-fi you always hear a他的ing sound before the music starts. However, the sounds that are the products of the human body's technology are extremely sharp and clear. A human ear never perceives a sound accompanied by a hissing sound or with atmospherics as does a hi-fi; rather, it perceives sound exactly as it is, sharp and clear. This is the way it has been since the Creation of man.
So far, no man-made visual or recording apparatus has been as sensitive and successful in perceiving sensory data as are the eye and the ear. However, as far as seeing and hearing are concerned, a far greater truth lies beyond all this.

To Whom Does the Consciousness that Sees and Hears Within the Brain Belong?

Who watches an alluring world in the brain, listens to symphonies and the twittering of birds, and smells the rose? The stimulations coming from a person's eyes, ears, and nose travel to the brain as electro-chemical nerve impulses. In biology, physiology, and biochemistry books, you can find many details about how this image forms in the brain. However, you will never come across the most important fact: Who perceives these electro-chemical nerve impulses as images, sounds, odors, and sensory events in the brain? There is a consciousness in the brain that perceives all this without feeling any need for an eye, an ear, and a nose. To whom does this consciousness belong? Of course it does not belong to the nerves, the fat layer, and neurons comprising the brain. This is why Darwinist-materialists, who believe that everything is comprised of matter, cannot answer these questions.

For this consciousness is the spirit created by Allah, which needs neither the eye to watch the images nor the ear to hear the sounds. Furthermore, it does not need the brain to think.

Everyone who reads this explicit and scientific fact should ponder on Almighty Allah, and fear and seek refuge in Him, for He squeezes the entire universe in a pitch-dark place of a few cubic centimeters in a three-dimensional, colored, shadowy, and luminous form.
A Materialist Faith

The information we have presented so far shows us that the theory of evolution is incompatible with scientific findings. The theory's claim regarding the origin of life is inconsistent with science, the evolutionary mechanisms it proposes have no evolutionary power, and fossils demonstrate that the required intermediate forms have never existed. So, it certainly follows that the theory of evolution should be pushed aside as an unscientific idea. This is how many ideas, such as the Earth-centered universe model, have been taken out of the agenda of science throughout history.

However, the theory of evolution is kept on the agenda of science. Some people even try to represent criticisms directed against it as an "attack on science." Why?

The reason is that this theory is an indispensable dogmatic belief for some circles. These circles are blindly devoted to materialist philosophy and adopt Darwinism because it is the only materialist explanation that can be put forward to explain the workings of nature.

Interestingly enough, they also confess this fact from time to time. A well-known geneticist and an outspoken evolutionist, Richard C. Lewontin from Harvard University, confesses that he is "first and foremost a materialist and then a scientist":

It is not that the methods and institutions of science somehow compel us accept a material explanation of the phenomenal world, but, on the contrary, that we are forced by our a priori adherence to material causes to create an apparatus of investigation and a set of concepts that produce material explanations, no matter how counter-intuitive, no matter how mystifying to the uninitiated. Moreover, that materialism is absolute, so we cannot allow a Divine [intervention]...20
These are explicit statements that Darwinism is a dogma kept alive just for the sake of adherence to materialism. This dogma maintains that there is no being save matter. Therefore, it argues that inanimate, unconscious matter brought life into being. It insists that millions of different living species (e.g., birds, fish, giraffes, tigers, insects, trees, flowers, whales, and human beings) originated as a result of the interactions between matter such as pouring rain, lightning flashes, and so on, out of inanimate matter. This is a precept contrary both to reason and science. Yet Darwinists continue to ignorantly defend it just so as not to acknowledge, in their own eyes, the evident existence of Allah.

Anyone who does not look at the origin of living beings with a materialist prejudice sees this evident truth: All living beings are works of a Creator, Who is All-Powerful, All-Wise, and All-Knowing. This Creator is Allah, Who created the whole universe from non-existence, in the most perfect form, and fashioned all living beings.

The Theory of Evolution: The Most Potent Spell in the World

Anyone free of prejudice and the influence of any particular ideology, who uses only his or her reason and logic, will clearly understand that belief in the theory of evolution, which brings to mind the superstitions of societies with no knowledge of science or civilization, is quite impossible.

As explained above, those who believe in the theory of evolution think that a few atoms and molecules thrown into a huge vat could produce thinking, reasoning professors and university students; such scientists as Einstein and Galileo; such artists as Humphrey Bogart, Frank Sinatra and Luciano
Pavarotti; as well as antelopes, lemon trees, and carnations. Moreover, as the scientists and professors who believe in this nonsense are educated people, it is quite justifiable to speak of this theory as "the most potent spell in history." Never before has any other belief or idea so taken away peoples' powers of reason, refused to allow them to think intelligently and logically, and hidden the truth from them as if they had been blindfolded. This is an even worse and unbelievable blindness than the totem worship in some parts of Africa, the people of Saba worshipping the Sun, the tribe of the Prophet Abraham (pbuh) worshipping idols they had made with their own hands, or some among the people of the Prophet Moses (pbuh) worshipping the Golden Calf.

In fact, Allah has pointed to this lack of reason in the Qur'an. In many verses, He reveals that some peoples' minds will be closed and that they will be powerless to see the truth. Some of these verses are as follows:

As for those who do not believe, it makes no difference to them whether you warn them or do not warn them, they will not believe. Allah has sealed up their hearts and hearing and over their eyes is a blindfold. They will have a terrible punishment. (Surat al-Baqara, 6-7)

... They have hearts with which they do not understand. They have eyes with which they do not see. They have ears with which they do not hear. Such people are like cattle. No, they are even further astray! They are the unaware. (Surat al-A'raf, 179)

Even if We opened up to them a door into heaven, and they spent the day ascending through it, they would only say: "Our eyesight is befuddled! Or rather we have been put under a spell!" (Surat al-Hijr, 14-15)
Words cannot express just how astonishing it is that this spell should hold such a wide community in thrall, keep people from the truth, and not be broken for 150 years. It is understandable that one or a few people might believe in impossible scenarios and claims full of stupidity and illogicality. However, "magic" is the only possible explanation for people from all over the world believing that unconscious and lifeless atoms suddenly decided to come together and form a universe that functions with a flawless system of organization, discipline, reason, and consciousness; a planet named Earth with all of its features so perfectly suited to life; and living things full of countless complex systems.

In fact, in the Qur'an Allah relates the incident of the Prophet Moses (pbuh) and Pharaoh to show that some people who support atheistic philosophies actually influence others by magic. When Pharaoh was told about the true religion, he told the Prophet Moses (pbuh) to meet with his own magicians. When the Prophet Moses (pbuh) did so, he told them to demonstrate their abilities first. The verses continue:

He said: "You throw." And when they threw, they cast a spell on the people's eyes and caused them to feel great fear of them. They produced an extremely powerful magic. (Surat al-A'raf, 116)

As we have seen, Pharaoh's magicians were able to deceive everyone, apart from the Prophet Moses (pbuh) and those who believed in him. However, his evidence broke the spell, or "swallowed up what they had forged," as revealed in the verse:

We revealed to Moses: "Throw down your staff." And it immediately swallowed up what they had forged. So the Truth took place and what they did was shown to be false. (Surat al-A'raf, 117-118)
As we can see, when people realized that a spell had been cast upon them and that what they saw was just an illusion, Pharaoh's magicians lost all credibility. In the present day too, unless those who, under the influence of a similar spell, believe in these ridiculous claims under their scientific disguise and spend their lives defending them, abandon their superstitious beliefs, they also will be humiliated when the full truth emerges and the spell is broken. In fact, world-renowned British writer and philosopher Malcolm Muggeridge, who was an atheist defending evolution for some 60 years, but who subsequently realized the truth, reveals the position in which the theory of evolution would find itself in the near future in these terms:

I myself am convinced that the theory of evolution, especially the extent to which it's been applied, will be one of the great jokes in the history books in the future. Posterity will marvel that so very flimsy and dubious an hypothesis could be accepted with the incredible credulity that it has.

That future is not far off: On the contrary, people will soon see that "chance" is not a deity, and will look back on the theory of evolution as the worst deceit and the most terrible spell in the world. That spell is already rapidly beginning to be lifted from the shoulders of people all over the world. Many people who see its true face are wondering with amazement how they could ever have been taken in by it.

They said: “Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. You are the All-Knowing, All-Wise.”

(Surat al-Baqara, 2:32)
